England, France Avoid Pledging Mutual Support

Both Sidestep Pending Statements on Italian, German Problems.

Unity Held Likely Against Italians

Odds Are 3 to 1; French Air Force Maneuvers Are Authorized.

The Situation Abroad.

At the conclusion of conferences between French and British officials, a British spokesman said the chances were 3 to 1 that France would support Britain in a strong stand against Italy. The French government unexpectedly ordered army maneuvers.

Because of increased tension, the Italian consulates in the provinces of Aduwa and Harar in Ethiopia were ordered evacuated by the Italian minister in Addis Ababa.

In Rome the press assailed as "unprovoked aggression" England's stationing her fleet in the Mediterranean. A British news agency reported from Addis Ababa that Italy has 20 submarines in the Red Sea prepared to intercept any shipments of war supplies to Ethiopia.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Oct. 1.—Negotiations between France and Great Britain for a mutual assistance agreement, inspired by complications of the Italo-Ethiopian crisis, today found both powers side-stepping specific pledges, officials said.

France, these officials explained, is unwilling to go any further for Britain in the event of Italian attack on the British Mediterranean fleet than it expects the London government to go in case of an air attack on France by Germany. The official French answer is expected to be drafted at Thursday's cabinet meeting.

Support Expected.

[The United Press, in a copyrighted dispatch from Paris, quoted a British spokesman as saying at the conclusion of the conference that the chances were 3 to 1 France would support a strong British stand against Italy.—Editor's note.]

At the same time, France authorized immediate military measures. The air force was unexpectedly ordered to begin maneuvers in the Lorraine and Champaign sectors, near the German frontier.

At Strasbourg, a frontier post, another regiment of "fortress infantry" was formed to strengthen the garrison.

The Prince of Wales lunched at the British Embassy with Premier Pierre Laval and other French officials, but officials said the event was of no political significance.

Guests at the luncheon included Maj. Gen. Marie Gustave Gamelin, chief of staff of the French army; Francois Pietri, minister of navy; Georges Mandel, minister of transportation, and the British ambassador, Sir George Russell Clerk.

It was officially disclosed that French efforts to make the Djibouti-Addis Ababa Railroad neutral have not found either Mussolini or Emperor Haile Selassie very receptive. Ethiopia, it was said, pointed out that the concession governing the railroad gives Ethiopia the right to use it in time of war.

Canal "Neutral."

The neutrality of the Suez Canal cannot be nullified by action of the League of Nations, officials of the Suez Canal Co. contended. The Treaty of 1888, they pointed out, provides that it must remain open in peace or war.

The aviation units ordered to start maneuvers tomorrow will limit themselves to defense measures to test the ability of the planes to parry attack quickly, it was explained by Gen. Victor Denain, minister for air.

Premier Laval conferred with Vittorio Cerruti, Italian ambassador to Paris, but the nature of their conversation was not disclosed.

3 Die, 3 Injured In Rock Quarry Powder Blast

Victims Hurled 75 Feet; Baltimore Explosion Felt Mile Away.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Oct. 1.—Three men were killed and three injured seriously today as a quantity of powder they were testing at a rock quarry exploded prematurely.

The force of the blast hurled some of the victims 75 feet. Rock was thrown high into the air, and the detonation was felt a mile away. The quarry is in the outskirts of the city.

The powder, which was being tested preparatory to putting it on the market commercially, exploded so suddenly that none of the victims had time to flee.

Three Dead, Three Hurt.

The dead were Harry Liptrap, 45, a quarry employe; Mac Liptrap, 36, his brother, and H. McKenny Miller, Charlottesville, Va. The seriously injured are Daniel A. Leonard, 64, Baltimore real estate operator, quarry builder and owner; Philip Martin, 34, foreman, and George Selby, of Baltimore.

Leonard, with Miller, had received permission to test the powder at the quarry of Thomas R. Martin & Son. Leonard had described the powder—developed during the World War—as "so safe you can mix it in a concrete mixer."

Accompanied by the Liptrap brothers and other workmen, Leon-

2 End Lives With Poison Aboard Train

Marriage Was Impossible So Pair Chose Suicide as Way Out.

Clerk Left Children and Wife for Romance With Cashier.

By the Associated Press.

Lake Charles, La., Oct. 1.—Distraught because previous marital ties prevented the wedding they desired, a young Oakdale, La., couple today took poison and died together on a train shortly after leaving Beaumont, Tex.

Claude (Sonny Boy) Seals, 24, who separated from his wife and two children some months ago and had gone to Beaumont to work, died in agony beside Gladys Johnson, 20-year-old divorcee, who was returning home after a week's visit with her aunt in San Antonio.

Dr. W. G. Fisher, Calcasieu Parish deputy coroner, issued death certificates declaring both cases suicide from poisoning. He said poison powders were found in Seals' pocket.

Couple Worked in Store.

For some time Seals had worked in Oakdale as a grocery clerk in a store where Miss Johnson was employed as cashier.

Deputy Sheriff Jim Collins, of DeQuincy, La., directed the removal of the bodies of the disappointed lovers from the train to Oakdale for burial. The deputy quoted the conductor as saying he saw the pair drink a liquid he believed to be ordinary medicine, from paper cups about 20 minutes after the train had left Beaumont.

"The man was screaming and the girl placed her hand over his mouth to quiet him," Spreeg said.

Notes Tell of Love.

Notes the couple left to relatives at their home town, Oakdale, authorities said, indicated frustrated love was their motive.

Seals threatened to kill himself in the note he wrote, but implored Miss Johnson, who reverted to usage of her maiden name after her divorce, "to go on living."

Miss Johnson explained in her note, addressed to her father and mother in Oakdale, that Seals wanted to marry her, but that he could not since he had not obtained a divorce from his wife.

She is survived by her parents, four sisters and a brother, all of Oakdale. Seals is survived by his wife, two young children, three brothers and three sisters, all of Oakdale, and his parents, who live just west of there.

Democrats Re-affirm Long's Election Laws

Baton Rouge, La., Oct. 1 (AP).—After heated debate the Louisiana Democratic State Central Committee today overrode all opposition and decided to keep intact the rigid election laws which the late Senator Huey P. Long set up under the political machine he left in the hands of Gov. O. K. Allen, his ally.

Allen was elected chairman of the committee and Democratic national committeeman, succeeding Long. The Senator was memorialized by the committee and then the Governor took up the dictatorial gavel where Long left off.

Ates Never Stuttered In Quarrel, Wife Says

Los Angeles, Oct. 1 (AP).—Roscoe Ates—the stuttering movie comedian—never got his tongue tangled when he spoke unkindly to his wife, Mrs. Ates testified today at a divorce hearing. What he meant, he said, Mrs. Ates told Superior Judge Isaac Pacht—and he said it without hesitation.

Judge Pacht granted the decree.

College Boy Jailed In Death of Co-Ed; Gin Party Charged

Colorado College co-ed, whose bruised body was found in the shallow waters of Cheyenne Creek, near Colorado Springs, after a ride with a college athlete.

Former Star Athlete Is Held for 'Protection,' Prosecutor Says.

By the Associated Press.

Colorado Springs, Colo., Oct. 1.—The death of a pretty Colorado College co-ed awaited tonight an investigation by a coroner's jury while her escort was held in jail "for his own protection" pending the inquest.

The body of Miss Margaret Wilm, 21, was found with the skull fractured and covered with bruises in shallow Cheyenne Creek early yesterday. Kenneth Garrett, 21, who was a senior at Colorado College last year but did not graduate, was in technical custody of officers.

Clyde Starrett, district attorney, said "We are convinced the girl plunged accidentally" into the creek, but he asserted there were discrepancies in statements made by Garrett which he wished to reconcile.

Prisoner Is Isolated.

The prosecutor directed Garrett be isolated from all visitors in the county jail "for his own protection."

"I don't want anyone trying to help him fix up a story," said Starrett.

"I am going to put his story and the story of other witnesses right up to the coroner's jury and let them decide what action, if any, will be taken."

Starrett referred to discrepancies he said he uncovered in the story told by the former college athlete of events that occurred while he was with the co-ed last night.

"In addition, Garrett's story and that of his sister and brother-in-law, who were with Miss Wilm the night before she was killed, do not check in all details," Starrett said.

Garrett, the district attorney said, acknowledged he had a glass of beer but asserted that was the only alcoholic beverage he drank Sunday night.

"Mr. and Mrs. George Sleppy, his sister and brother-in-law, told me he also drank gin," Starrett said.

Starrett said there was another "important" difference in the stories but would not disclose it until the jury meets Thursday.

The district attorney said young Garrett told him he took Miss Wilm and the Sleppys for a ride Sunday evening, drove to the Sleppy home, let the women out and then he and Sleppy went for a 10-minute ride.

He said he returned to the Sleppy home and fell asleep in the car, staying there 45 minutes. During the evening he said he and Miss Wilm quarreled and he asked for

Woman's Slayer Is Doomed to Die

Jersey Jury Deliberates Only 40 Minutes.

By the Associated Press.

Bridgeton, N. J., Oct. 1.—A jury of nine men and three women today convicted Romaine Johnson, 32-year-old Negro, of first degree murder in the brutal slaying of Mrs. Minnie Horuvitz.

Common Pleas Judge Leroy W. Loder sentenced Johnson to die in the electric chair the week of November 11. The jury required but 40 minutes after receiving the case. Johnson showed no emotion when he heard the death sentence.

Johnson admitted from the witness stand he beat Mrs. Horuvitz to death. He said he was intoxicated and intended to rob the family. He denied he tried to criminally assault Mrs. Horuvitz.

G.O.P. Claims The President Broke Pledge

Failure to Cut Budget Stressed; Radio Attack Opens Tonight.

2,760 in NRA Despite Death of Blue Eagle, His Foes Charge.

Further evidence came to light last night that the Republican national committee intends to center its fire against the Administration, for the time being at least, on the issue of "broken promises."

"Roosevelt versus Roosevelt" was the title selected for the leading article in the committee's publication, "Facts and Opinions," given circulation yesterday. The article bore the subhead "As Candidate He Denounced Federal Bureaucracy Getting Paid for Things 'Neither Practical Nor Necessary;' as President He Keeps Thousands on a Seven Million-Dollar a Year Pay Roll, Sitting Around the Corpse of the Blue Eagle."

The publication was issued only 24 hours after the critical statement of Representative Chester C. Bolton, chairman of the Republican congressional campaign committee, asking, in effect: "Where now are the promises of a balanced budget, reduction in Government expense and sound money?" Bolton also announced a series of radio addresses, beginning tonight, to carry on a "vigorous and continued attack" on the Roosevelt record.

Roosevelt Speech Quoted.

A speech by Mr. Roosevelt at Sioux City, Iowa, in the 1932 campaign, was quoted by the Republican publication as follows:

"I propose to analyze the enormous increase in the growth of bureaucracy. We are not getting an adequate return for the money we are spending at Washington; or to put it another way around, we are spending altogether too much money for Government services which are neither practical nor necessary."

Then the Republican committee comments:

"The 'Blue Eagle' has been dead over three months, but the Roosevelt Administration is keeping 2,760 individuals sitting around the corpse, and paying them at the rate of over $7,000,000 a year for so doing.

No Litigation Pending.

"There is no litigation pending in the courts affecting the defunct NRA, but the Roosevelt Administration is keeping on NRA pay rolls 87 lawyers at an aggregate salary of $427,000 a year.

"There are no codes to administer, but the Roosevelt Administration is keeping on the pay rolls of the NRA an aggregate of 220 administrators, assistants, compliance officers, etc., at a combined annual salary of $977,500.

"Most, if not all of these are political henchmen, appointed outside of civil service. The whole NRA set-up as it now exists is the creature of an executive order issued by President Roosevelt June 15, 1935. These political sinecures, filled with Democratic political henchmen, could be abolished by executive order overnight if President Roosevelt desired to live up to the sentiments expressed in his Sioux City, Iowa, speech."

The charge is made that many NRA employes have been loaned to other Government departments, including the White House itself, "de-

75,000 on Coast Cheer Roosevelt Plea to Liberals

Appeal for Unity Hailed by Gathered Factions in Los Angeles.

Sinclair Attacks New Deal Methods

Wages Down, Prices Up in California, He Says as President Arrives.

By Raymond Clapper.
A Staff Correspondent.

Los Angeles, Oct. 1.—Before one of the largest political audiences he ever addressed, gathered in the Olympic Stadium and estimated at 75,000 persons, President Roosevelt today appealed to all liberals to unite, each making some concession in form and method, in order that all may reach their common objective.

This address, though brief, appeared to have been skillfully drafted by Mr. Roosevelt for the purpose of extending open arms to the various political schools which flourish here in southern California—notably the Upton Sinclair "EPIC" group, the Townsend-plan advocates, and the Utopian Society.

Recalling that President Wilson once told him that the greatest problem of a progressive leader in a democracy was not the criticism of reactionaries nor the attacks of those who would set up another form of government, but the reconcilement and unifying of progressive liberals themselves, Mr. Roosevelt continued:

"The overwhelming majority of liberals all seek the same end, the same ultimate objectives. But because they see far beyond the end of their own noses, they are very apt to want to reach that goal by different roads.

Urges Union of Liberals.

"People who do not want to move forward in the improvement of civilization are content to stand in one spot, and these people find it easy to remain united in demanding inaction.

"Liberals, therefore, in order to make their efforts successful, must find common ground and a common road, each making some concession as to form and method in order that all may obtain the substance of what all desire."

As Mr. Roosevelt arrived in Los Angeles, en route from Boulder Dam to San Diego, Upton Sinclair, former Socialist and last year the Democratic candidate for Governor of California, issued an open letter declaring that the measures thus far undertaken by the Administration, "have not succeeded in California."

Sinclair already has indicated that he would support President Roosevelt for reelection, but he explained in his open letter that he would be rendering an ill service if he did not tell him that his measures had failed here.

"Wages Down, Prices Up."

"Unemployment has not decreased, but wages have decreased and prices have increased," Sinclair's letter said.

"Our people know that mass production by you and for the unemployed offers the only escape from State and national bankruptcy and the only way of using our enormous powers of production for the welfare of all."

While Sinclair thus insists upon a "production for use" policy, the Townsendites, whose old-age pension plan was born at Long Beach, a short distance away, insist with equal emphasis that only the revolving old-age pension plan can save the situation.

It was apparently to this babel of voices, each cheering for its own panacea, that Mr. Roosevelt addressed his remarks in the vast Olympic Stadium, also known as the Coliseum.

With a seating capacity of more than 100,000, the tiers of the gigantic open-air bowl, reaching up as high, it seemed, as Boulder Dam itself, were at least three-quarters filled, the varigated colors of bright sweaters and colored dresses forming a multicolored curtain of humanity sweeping upward from the rich green lawn of the athletic field where Mr. Roosevelt's automobile was drawn up. Microphones carried his voice to every corner of the crowd and roaring cheers interrupted him frequently.

He struck a liberal keynote at the opening of his speech, saying that to the liberal spirit of California, the national program owed a great debt.

"No State," Mr. Roosevelt said as the audience cheered, "has been

Death for Two Asked in Fire Fatal to Ten

Grocer, Seeking Insurance, Wanted 'Small Blaze;' 10 Met Death.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 1.—Prosecutors declared tonight they would seek the death penalty for two prisoners who allegedly plotted a tenement fire fatal to ten persons—six of them children—to collect $3,000 insurance.

Assistant State's Attorney Marshal V. Kearney prepared to go before the grand jury asking murder indictments against Joseph Vitale, 45, proprietor of a grocery in the burned building, and Joseph di Chiari, 31, whom Vitale reportedly confessed he hired for a promised $100 as the "torch."

At Maxwell Street Police Station, Capt. John Norton said Vitale, his nephew, also Joseph Vitale, and a brother-in-law, Sam Jacopelli, all named Di Chiari as the actual incendiary. Kearney said Di Chiari had made "damaging admissions" after being confronted with the others' story.

With a shrug, officers said, Vitale declared he had wanted Di Chiari to start only a small blaze in the building in which 20 persons were sleeping Sunday night.

Pressed for money, his story, according to Capt. Norton, was that he consulted his nephew, a tavern keeper, who proposed the fire and told him Di Chiari was "your man" for the job.

"That building is full of kids. You

Other doctors, however, said the fever might have come from less unusual sources. "You can contract a slight fever from love-birds," said one.

That Squall Wasn't Unusual For October, Experts Declare

If yesterday's weather, with its forbidding skies, its flurries of rain and its falling temperature seemed unusual to those who hurried along Washington's streets, it didn't seem so to the Weather Bureau.

"It's just an ordinary change in the weather," said a meteorological expert. "You must remember that this is October. What has happened is that cold air moving down from the Northwest has pushed upward the warm air, creating the disturbance.

"The forecast calls for a clearing of the skies and a continued drop in the temperature."

The temperature at sunrise today, he added, would probably be as low as 47, which is decidedly blanket and overcoat weather. With a clear sky, the sun should chase this early morning chill in a hurry.

Judging from the many queries, many Washingtonians thought that the ugly weather late yesterday was born of the hurricane that grazed the Florida coast the other day. This impression, the Weather Bureau said, was erroneous, adding that this particular disturbance is now up around Nova Scotia.

Posthumous Confession Bares Carpetbagger's Assassination

By the Associated Press.

Danville, Va., Oct. 1.—The "inside" story of the assassination of J. W. Stephens, a carpetbagger, by Ku Klux Klansmen in the Yanceyville (N. C.) courthouse during Reconstruction days of 1870, was revealed today for the first time in a deposition made in 1919 by Capt. John G. Lea, of Danville, and locked in a vault until after his death.

In his statement, Lea, who was a Klan organizer in Caswell County in 1870, and who died Sunday at South Boston, Va., names Col. J. T. Mitchell and Thomas Oliver, now dead, as the executioners of Stephens.

The assassination, which occurred while a rally of Negro Republicans was under way in the courthouse, led to a declaration of martial law in the county and indirectly to the impeachment of Gov. W. W. Holden of North Carolina. Two hundred persons were arrested by the carpetbagger government in connection with Stephens' death, but released after trials because of the lack of evidence.

The Lea statement declares Stephens was condemned to die by the Caswell Klan, which accused him of arson. It was decided he should be called from the political meeting held just prior to the congressional election and attended by white and colored voters.

Former Sheriff Wiley, the deposition said, beckoned to Stephens and he came out of the meeting, through a door and into the hands of a picked group of klansmen, who pushed him into a small room in the courthouse.

Mitchell was named in the statement as the man who placed a rope around Stephens' neck and drew it tight, and Thomas Oliver as the man who plunged a knife into him. The klansmen left the body where it lay and it was discovered the next day.

The klansmen swore never to reveal to others who had participated in the enterprise until the last one was dead. Capt. Lea was the last, succumbing in his ninety-second year from the infirmities of age and a broken hip. The deposition was made at the urgent request of the North Carolina Historical Commission.

Mention of the late Will Rogers brought thundering applause and cheering.

This vast aplauding audience was only a fragment of the multitudes who cheered Mr. Roosevelt as he drove about Los Angeles and its suburbs on a 50-mile automobile ride. Not a mile of this drive was without its lanes of cheering people along the curb.

Through the downtown section he rode for blocks, about four miles in all, through densely packed crowds.

It was by far the largest outpouring on this trip and ranks probably as one of the largest in his presidential career. Enthusiasm was evident everywhere.

The Democratic Party in California, which in registrations has passed the Republican, is badly torn internally. However, representatives of all factions were on hand to pay their respects at the train.

Leaders Present.

Justiceh Wardell, the defeated conservative candidate for the Democratic nominatoin for Governor last year, and J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency, and a close friend of William G. McAdoo, were present. Upton Sinclair's manager, Culbert Olson, State senator and chairman of the Democratic State central committee, was present. Postmaster H. B. R. Briggs, former editor of the Los Angeles Record and a political supporter of McAdoo, also was at the train.

The California Senators, Johnson and McAdoo, were absent because of illness.

An odd addition to this assortment of Democrats was Gov. Merriam of California, elected as a conservative Republican against Sinclair last year, now in some ill-favor among his former supporters because he is for the Townsend plan.

It was an assorted milling of all colors of political thought and Mr. Roosevelt remained on safe ground by addressing himself in generalities to the ideals of liberalism.

Leaving his train shortly after breakfast, Mr. Roosevelt was taken on the 50-mile automobile tour of the Los Angeles region. Turning into Spring street in the downtown section, showers of ticker tape and bits of torn paper came down from the taller office buildings. The broad steps of city hall and other public buildings in the civic group were packed with rows of spectators. Buildings and streets were decorated.

Receives Degree.

The presidential motorcade, flanked by motorcycle police, turned off into Temple street to pass again through crowded lanes. It was the same the length of Broadway. Crowds lined Flower street and Jefferson boulevard.

Mr. Roosevelt paused at the University of Southern California to receive the honorary degree of doctor of laws. Then a short distance away his car swung into the Olympic Stadium, where Mayor Shaw of Los Angeles introduced the President and Mrs. Roosvelt.

Next, with a heavy mist falling, Mr. Roosevelt in an open car with the top back, headed toward Beverly Hills, out Wilshire boulevard. Later the mist became so heavy that the top was put up to protect Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt from the dampness. Crowds still remained despite the light rain which fell intermittently throughout the drive.

Mr. Roosevelt paused at a veterans' hospital to greet the patients through a loud speaker.

"Boys," he said, "I wish I could get into the hospital to see you."

Rolling down long palmed-lined streets in the residential section, passing scores of magnificent homes of millionaires and movie stars, the Presidential procession swung across the campus of the University of California, through Hollywood, passed Charles Chaplin who was standing on the steps of his studio, visited a CCC camp near Griffith Park, where he unveiled a monument to the laboring youth, and then returned to the city through the Chinese, Japanese and Mexican quarters. There the crowds, some in native costume, were as enthusiastic as the laughing co-eds back on the campus, or the platinum blondes of Hollywood.

Leaving Los Angeles by train in the late afternoon, Mr. Roosevelt planned to spend the night at San Diego, back again in a solid bed after six consecutive nights on his train. A visit to the San Diego Exposition, another address and a review of the fleet were on his schedule for tomorrow. Then he will put out to sea in the cruiser Houston, to rest and fish on his way back to Washington through the Panama Canal.

Between You and Me

Petty Fumbling Dogs Roosevelt on Trip; Embarrassing Slips; Wanted: An Adviser.

By Raymond Clapper

ON Board President Roosevelt's Special Train, Oct. 1. On President Roosevelt's trip across the country, and for some time before, there has been a series of fumbles which were not like what we had come to expect of such an astute political craftsman.

In the early days of his Administration, when he was describing himself as the quarter back, his team was streaking down the field like one of Knute Rockne's old-time Notre Dame machines. Or was it that in the glamour of those first New Deal days, all of us were so excited that we didn't or wouldn't notice the fumbles? Were they going on all of the time and is it merely that the cash customers have begun to demand more for their money and consequently are more fishy-eyed as they watch the antics of the boys out on the field?

Concede that in major strategy, Mr. Roosevelt still shows Roosevelt ian genius. He is giving skillful direction to the shaping of the AAA political issue. Although belatedly, he has shifted strikingly to anticipate the Republican-Conservative attack by giving business a breathing spell. By emphasizing budget savings, by reassuring the country against further heavier taxation, and by, especially on this Western trip, hammering at every stop to connect his policies with the more prosperous conditions now returning.

Those are shrewd maneuvers. Not so shrewd are the little things that are seen in a worm's-eye close-up. Petty, perhaps, but revealing. They reveal a lack of good organization, of ability to pick the right men, to plan carefully, and a tendency to leap without looking, the same weaknesses which have shown in larger aspects of the Administration, most glaringly in the works program.

* * * *

The letter to clergymen, which leaked out just before Mr. Roosevelt left Washington, has plagued him.

While crossing Nebraska, newspapers came aboard the train disclosing that the language of the letter was identical in some paragraphs with a similar letter sent by Gov. Philip La Follette to Wisconsin clergymen last March.

Issuing of such a letter in itself was a questionable move. It caused many clergymen to observe that Mr. Roosevelt was not so solicitous for their views when he brought liquor back. It gave some of them opportunity to make more personal observations, and it tended to draw ministers back into politics when a great many people, after the experience of mixing religion with politics in 1928, hoped that the two would be kept separated for all time.

Not only was the letter questionable in this regard, but it was not even original, apparently. Members of the secretariat refuse to discuss it. They want to let the matter fade out of mind. Apparently someone sold the same idea to both Mr. Roosevelt and Gov. La Follette.

* * * *

That happened to Mr. Roosevelt once before—in the spring before he was nominated, when he and Smith were snapping at each other. Prof. Lindsay Rogers, of Columbia, prepared a memorandum on the tariff. He sent copies copies to the late Mrs. Belle Moskowitz, who was writing Smith's speeches, and to Prof. Ray Moley, who was writing Roosevelt's. As a result, both candidates for the presidential nomination made speeches containing identical language.

It was almost as embarrassing as the slip when Roosevelt, while Governor of New York, preparing a Thangskiving proclamation, copied from the Episcopal Prayer Book. He inadvertently omitted quotation marks, so that the finished job was hailed by editorial writers as a most eloquent composition, far above the usual officeholder's rhetoric, until some sharp-eyed rector recognized the language. It was an accident, and a painful one.

Mr. Roosevelt's naval statement, issued from his train a few days ago, appears to have been too quick on the trigger. It was issued in response to a report in the British press, which later was disavowed by the British government as a wild fabrication.

* * * *

Another instance of carelessness with the booting of the Kentucky political situation when an attempt was made to stage a peace conference on the presidential train. White House Secretary McIntyre dashed off a telegram of invitation to Gov. Laffoon of Kentucky, but either his pen slipped or the telegraph company, and the governor, already aggrieved at the treatment he had received from the Administration, chose to be publicly affronted over the wording of the message.

The incident, intended to heal the Democratic factional feud in face of the close Kentucky governorship election, to be held in November, only made it worse. A little care in advance arrangements would have saved trouble.

And was it good political judgment to have used the Boulder Dam dedication as an occasion for reviving the controversy over the name of the dam? The Roosevelt Administration erased the name Hoover Dam and restored the original designation of Boulder Dam. In opening the ceremonies Secretary of Interior Ickes remarked pointedly that if the dam were to be named for any living person it should be named for Senator Hiram Johnson, who was instrumental in putting through the enabling legislation.

Senator Pittman, in introducing the President, pointed out that Wilson and Roosevelt had been interested in the dam. He did not mention Coolidge, who signed the act, nor Hoover, under whom construction began. This attempt to monopolize the glory and conspicuously omit sharing the credit with Republicans who had a part in the achievement placed a political color over an occasion worthy to be elevated above such considerations. Actually it would have been smarter to have proclaimed this dam as a thing above politics and to have insisted that the same should apply to all public works. It would have been better politics to have kept politics out of this occasion, wouldn't it?

What President Roosevelt needs is a good political adviser at his elbow, one like Louis Howe was before he was taken ill. Mr. Roosevelt could find a thousand ward politicians in the country who could do these things better than they are being done now.

Academic Year Opened by Unit At Georgetown

President O'Leary Urges College Men to Fight for Rights of Man.

College men were urged to oppose the "usurpation of human and religious rights" o nthe part of governments by the Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president of Georgetown University, at exercises formally opening the new academic year at the College of Arts and Sciences yesterday.

"Public discontent in this country is a seething caldron, from which we may expect almost any results," asserted the Georgetown rector.

"As a result of all this and of high-handed methods on the part of governments, Communism is ready to graps the throats of all State governments," he warned.

Probably never before in the Nation's history has there been greater need for leadership, President O'Leary said.

"As we look about, we find turmoil," he stated. "In the ranks of the people there is the greatest distress, financial and social. They are disappointed with things as they are.

"There are some leaders, it is true, but they are too few to stem the tide. Your task during your college years is to prepare yourselves for the leadership which will help to guide men along the right path."

Seven undergraduates were awarded scholastic prizes for winning outstanding competitions during the previous year. The awards included the Hamilton Philodemic Medal for debating, the highest honor in the college, which was presented to Leo F. Curley, a senior, son of Gov. James M. Curley, of Massachusetts.

Other awards were presented by President O'Leary as follows: The Quicksall Shakespearean Medal, Ralph D. Cameron, of Keokuk, Iowa; the Dahlgren Medal in differential calculus, John C. Gartner, of the District of Columbia; the Kidwell Medal in junior physics, Augustus Kramm, the District of Columbia; the Horace Medal for translating odes of Horace, Francis A. Finnegan, of Bangor, Me.; the ynch Pendergast Medal in English literature, Bernardo E. Nunes, of Jackson Heights, Long Island, N. Y., and O'Brien Medal in junior philosophy, Joseph E. Finley, of Mount Vernon, N. Y.

The Mass of the Holy Ghost was celebrated in Dahlgren Chapel during the morning for the resident students in honor of the opening of the academic term. The Rev. John E. Grattan, S. J., dean of the college, was celebrant. The deacon was the Rev. Ferdinan H. Schoberg, S. J., and the sub-deacon, the Rev. William C. Bier, S. J., both members of the faculty.

3 Nations Plan Air Pact Aimed Against Soviet

Germany, Hungary, Poland Reported in Alliance to Check Bolshevism.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Berlin, Oct. 1.—Germany, Hungary and Poland tonight were reported discussing an air pact to combat the menace of a bolshevist foothold in Central Europe. Russia and Czecho-slovakia have concluded an aviation agreement.

Diplomats understood such an agreement was being negotiated with Hungarian Premier Julius Goemboes, who has talked with Reichsfuehrer Adolph Hitler; Air Minister Herman Wilhelm Goering and other officials during his "mystery trip" to Berlin.

Polish diplomats reportedly participated in the recent "political deer hunt" of Goering and Goemboes in east Prussia.

Pact Resented by Germany.

German political circles deeply resented the Russo-Czecho-slovakian agreement allowing the Soviet air force to use airports in Czecho-slovakia. The military agreement, to which the air agreement was appended, likewise stiffened the opposition of two other neighbors of Czecho-slovakia—Hungary and Poland.

Hungary traditionally is antagonistic to the Czechs, leading power of the Little Entente, an alliance of post-war countries dedicated to maintaining a territorial status quo injurious to Hungary.

Proposed revision of the territorial clauses of the Versailles Treaty is at the root of Hungarian opposition to Czechoslovakia. Poland is not a revisionist but finds it to her advantage to co-operate with these nations because they also happen to be anti-Russian. Defense against the Soviets has been the keystone of Polish foreign policy since establishment of the Pilsudski regime.

Antagonism Held Motive.

Traditional opposition to the Bolshevists by the Fascist and semi-Fascist states is believed behind the proposed German-Polish-Hungarian agreement.

Because of her traditional friendship with Italy, Hungary now is in a position to capitalize on the current crisis in Italy's European relations by mediating between Germany and Italy. In this way the three-cornered agreement may be put on a still broader basis.

However, diplomats wonder whether difficulties arising from Italy's European and Mediterranean adventures and from the Austrian problem can be overcome. Italy might gain strategically by lining up with the Nazis—but Premier Benito Mussolini still regards Reichsfuehrer Hitler as an antagonist in Austria and wishes to preserve Austria's independence from Germany.

Blast on Barge Injures Watchman

Windows in Annapolis Homes Shattered.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 1.—One man was injured and scores of windows were shattered early today when a derrick barge, moored at Manresa-on-the-Severn, near the Baltimore & Annapolis Railway Bridge, caught fire, exploding a sealed five-gallon oil drum. The barge was destroyed.

Lewis Hatchett, 48,year-old Negro watchman for a Baltimore construction company, repairing the Severn River span, suffered hand burns and back injuries. He was treated at Emergency Hospital here. Residents over a 2-mile area were aroused by the blast.

Hatchett said the wind blew out his lantern and when he struck a match it ignited a pile of oakum on the barge's deck. Flames spread quickly to the deckhouse, he continued, and he jumped ashore just before the huge derrick boom collapsed.

Two-Hundred-Foot Bridge Span Collapses

Italy Charges Britain's Fleet Is 'Aggression'

Massing in Mediterranean Is Declared 'Military Sanction.'

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Oct. 1.—Italy, perturbed by the fact the British fleet remains in the Mediterranean, asked herself today "What does Britain intend to do?"

The naval concentratoin was construed by informed quarters as strictly a military sanction. Therefore, Italy asked, why is Britain "considering a blockade" when the League has not yet voted sanctions, even economic or financial?

(A Reuters London dispatch from Addis Ababa said 16 Italian submarines were reported stationed in the Red Sea and in event of war would try to intercept munitions and other war supplies which may be shipped to Ethiopia from other countries.)

Referring to the British concentration, the newspaper La Tribuna said: "Everyone knows what to call such a monstrous absurdity—'the most incredible aggression.'"

Italian officials said they doubted if the League would vote unanimously for military sanctions. Therefore, since Sir Samuel Hoare has limited Britain to collective action only, an authoritative person commented: "Britain on her own account has anticipated the program and measures of the League."

Italian quarters called Ethiopia's impending mobilization a "menacing threat" of war and said there had been no Italian advance across Ethiopia's border.

They asserted the danger of a sudden outbreak of war would come from Ethiopia, not this country.

Officials claimed their scouts in East Africa had detected the presence of strong Ethiopian troops in areas near Italy's frontiers, supposedly evacuated.

Va. Oyster Tonging System Is Opened

Good Strike, Fair Market Reported on First Day.

By the Associated Press.

Newport News, Va., Oct. 1.—The tonging season on public oyster rocks in Virginia waters opened today, with scattered reports indicating a "good strike" and a fair market.

Tongers went to work in the James and Rappahannock rivers. Rocks in the Potomac River which are controlled jointly by Virginia and Maryland opened September 15, and oysters have been taken from private planting grounds for some time.

The Virginia Commission of Fisheries office here anticipates that approximately the same number of licenses will be issued by inspectors this year as in 1934, when 950 were allowed in September and 1,900 in October.

Italian Envoys Told to Vacate African Posts

Order to Oduwa and Harar Posts Follows Rise in Tension There.

By the Associated Press.

Addis Ababa, Oct. 1.—Increasing tension between Italy and Ethiopia led the Italian minister here, Luigi Vinci-Gigliucci, to order today the five Italian consulates in Aduwa and Harar provinces evacuated.

Some 20 other Italian consular agents in the interior are trying to reach Addis Ababa, the Sudan or Eritrea. They are forced to travel by horse or mule and, because of the boggy roads, are making slow progress. Floods have marooned four of the agents from Debra Markos on the right bank of the River Nile at Dejen, a week's journey from this capital. Ferries are unable to cross the stream.

Foreigners, convinced a general Ethiopian mobilization is imminent, expressed belief Emperor Haile Selassie would call it this week-end. Such an action, said the Italian minister, would be only a formality. He asserted all Ethiopian able-bodied men long since have been called to arms.

Ethiopian women leaders have pledged themselves to assume full duty in case of war. Some would go as "storm troops," while others would carry food and munitions and act as nurses.

A mobilization order already is in the hands of all provisional governors and commanders, ready to be posted the instant the Emperor gives the command.

hadn't better do it," objected Jacopelli, who was present at the conference, according to Norton's account.

But Sunday afternoon, before Vitale closed the store for the first time in 15 years, the arrangements were all completed. The arsonist had carried 15 gallons of gasoline into the basement on the promise he would receive $100 when Vitale collected from the insurance company.

The flames trapped the sleeping tenants. Six members of Frank Cappola's family, including the father and five children, lost their lives. The other victims were Joseph Grasso and a 16-year-old daughter, and Mrs. Rose Angelsano and her daughter.

Cappola and one daughter died last night as Vitale was being questioned. He had maintained innocence until his two children, with whom he had driven to the blaze in a taxi to find the tenants screaming for aid, had related conflicting stories to the questioners.

B. & O. Favors Rate Reduction For Passengers

Railroad Asks Approval of of I.C.C. for Lower Fares, Opposes Other Lines.

By Robert C. Albright.

Taking sharp exception to the views of four other large Eastern railroads, the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad yesterday asked the Interstate Commerce Commission for a general reduction in rail passenger fares and Pullman surcharges.

Charles R. Webber, attorney for the road, in a brief filed with the commission, urged lowering of rates to meet modern competitive conditions and to stimulate lagging rail revenues.

The Interstate Commerce Commission tomorrow will hear arguments on the proposed fare reduction, which already has the indorsement of Irving L. Koch, a commission examiner. Following a study of the whole passenger rate structure, Koch recommended a paring of fares in an effort to recoup lost traffic.

Second Brief Filed.

The Baltimore & Ohio brief filed yesterday was the second submitted by the company. Whereas four other Eastern roads had warned of ruinous losses if the examiner's recommendations are followed, the B. & O. brief wholeheartedly supported Koch's position.

"It seems clear that the reason why there has been a constant decrease in the movement of passengers using the railroads is due primarily to the fares which were established when conditions were entirely different from those of today," it stated.

"The record in this proceeding clearly indicates that the solution of the problem before the commission lies in the elimination of the surcharge and the fixing of fares that will permit the traffic to move."

During the last few years, railroads of half the country have embarked on an experimental passenger rate-cutting program, particularly in the South and West, starting with reduced excursion fares and ending with general rate slashes.

Up to three years ago, the basic rate of 3.6 cents a mile, with a 50 per cent surcharge on Pullman tickets, established by the I. C. C. during war-time Federal control, had prevailed.

The Southern Railway pioneered in this field, with permission of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Experimenting with a 1½-cent rate for coaches and a 3-cent rate without surcharge for Pullmans, it was able to show salutary results in increased passenger traffic. Soon this rate prevailed generally in the South, and a 2-cent rate was inaugurated in the West. Eastern roads generally, however, clung to the 3.6 basic rate except for excursions and special runs.

2-Cent Rate Favored.

Following a comprehensive survey of the rate structure, Examiner Koch in July recommended as a maximum future fare basis a rate of 2 cents per mile in coaches and 3 cents in Pullmans, with removal of the 50 per cent Pullman surcharge. He argued that mounting railroad deficits resulted from serious losses in passenger traffic since 1923.

"Extraordinary measures are imperative," he said, "in order to regain such traffic and insure to the railroads a reasonable share of the increased intercity traffic of the future. They can not hope to share reasonably in that market except at fares more nearly commensurate with the price and convenience of travel by highway with changed economic conditions."

Last month, four Eastern roads took exception to Koch's findings, contending the proposed passenger fare cut would cost them $27,456,393. The Baltimore & Ohio did not join in their objections. The protesting roads estimated the loss in revenue at $9,193,115 for the New York Central System; $4,223,378 for the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad; $12,324,200 for the Pennsylvania Railroad and $1,715,700 for the Long Island Railroad.

Commission Warned.

"It (the ICC) cannot start the drain of one of the most important sources of these carriers' revenues and escape responsibility for the ensuing shortage of income sufficient to supply the transportation needs of the country and to provide the people of the United States with adequate transportation," this group of Eastern roads warned the commission.

Taking a diametrically opposite view, Webber, in the brief filed yesterday for the Baltimore & Ohio, flatly supported the lower fare recommendations of the commission examiner.

Pointing to Koch's report that "only in the eastern district is the basic fare of 3.6 cents and the surcharge still maintained," Webber asked why railroads in other parts of the country had abandoned the old fares. He said the answer was obvious.

"The surcharge and the basic fare have driven passenger traffic to competing methods of transportation," the Baltimore & Ohio brief stated. "Both fares have had a long trial and their failure even to retain the traffic that once used the railroads proves that they are no longer useful but are an actual hindrance to successful operation of passenger service. The Eastern district is the most populous in the country and should constitute the best field for passenger operation."

Webber argued that in 1934 passenger traffic in the Eastern district was little more than half what it was in 1929, while 1934 passenger traffic almost equaled the 1929 volume in the Southern district, where Pullman surcharges have been eliminated and basic fares reduced.

"It can be stated with confidence that in both the Western district and Southern district passenger travel has steadily increased and the same is true of revenues therefrom, and it seems idle to argue that similar results may not be obtained in the most populous district in the country," Webber's brief read.

He said the decrease in passenger revenue in the Eastern district in uen and July of this year was $2,000,000, compared with a Western district increase in such revenue of $1,154,240.

"The record shows the successful results which have been achieved through reductions in the Southern district and in the Western district, and the reports to the commission for the current year are sufficient to justify lower rates in the Eastern district," his brief stated.

He said not only general passenger rate reductions, but low week-end fares and excursion rates had demonstrated their value in increasing travel and adding to passenger revenue.

"It is earnestly urged," he concluded, "that the commission take into consideration the competition which must be met by the railroads and its effect upon passenger transportation and also the improvements and increased facilities that have been made in connection with transportation by railroad."

UNITED—Still Breaking World Records!

United Air Lines has averaged 20,000 passengers a month for three consecutive months—an international record for air travel!

No other air line in the world approaches the remarkable total of passenger-miles flown every day by United planes from coast to coast and border to border.

And here are some of the reasons for United's popularity:

● Its record of 85,000,000 miles experience.
● Its direct Mid-Continent Route.
● Faster, quieter 1935 type twin-engined planes on every schedule.
● Fastest, shortest flights between the East and most Pacific Coast cities.
● Speed plus personalized attention—popular stewardess service, good food aloft, splendid station facilities, United's habit of treating the traveler as a "guest of the line."
● America's grandest scenery.

Fastest to CHICAGO (4 hrs. 28 min.) 8 flights daily overnight to California, Pacific Northwest

By Ed Sullivan

Thinking Out Loud.

New York, Oct. 1.

AT 10:31 on the morning of February 16, 1935, Bruno Hauptmann was admitted to the New Jersey State Prison and became No. 17,400 in the criminal index of that State. The entire world, in fancy, marched with the convicted man to the gates of the prison and saw him disappear behind the steel lattices, for this was the biggest Page 1 story of its kind. It did not seem possible that he could be forced from Page 1.

Yet in the space of seven months, so many things have happened that Hauptmann emerges somewhat hazily on the canvas of current events. This is almost incredible, but quite true.

• • • •

The assassination of Huey Long, the fatal plane crash of Will Rogers and Wiley Post, Barbara Hutton's marriage to Count von Reventlow, the George Weyerhaeuser kidnaping, Babe Ruth's exit from baseball, the fatal auto crash of Prince Alexis Mdiyini, the fatal auto accident of Queen Astrid of the Belgians, the death of Evelyn Hoey, the SOS from the S. S. Dixie, and the storm deaths of A. E. F. veterans on the Florida keys, the John Barrymore-Elaine Barrie merry-go-round, the accession of James J. Braddock to the world heavyweight championship throne, and Max Baer's subsequent annihiliation by Joe Louis, the income tax whitewash of James J. Walker, the dramatic death of Len Koenecke, Brooklyn Dodger player, in an airplane over Toronto . . . these wiped Hauptmann off Page 1. The dangerous Italo-Ethiopian situation completed his removal from the public mind.

• • • •

There has been a great volume of water under the bridge in the space of seven months. Disaster has struck repeatedly and written its own history in bloody letters. But I imagine that No. 17,400, alone with his thoughts in the New Jersey State Prison, is indifferent to what goes on in a world that has branded him an outcast. No Page 1 story could be so stark in realism, I imagine, as the three men who shuffled past his cell on March 15 to die in the electric chair. Seven days later, the fourth man shuffled down the last mile. I doubt that he cares whether Mussolini attacks the land of Haile Selassie, I doubt that he cares that the slate-gray battle squadrons of Britain are drawn up under the frowning parapets of Gibraltar.

When you have Death as a cellmate it must be hard to concentrate on newspapers.

• • • •

I thought of this on Saturday night at the Ambassador Theater, on W. 45th St. Ricardo Cortez, Bill Farnsworth, Bruce MacFarlane, Jules Girden, myself and seven others had been called from the audience to serve as the jury in Al H. Woods' production, "Night of January 16th" . . . As we seated ourselves in the stage jury box, Girden whispered: "First time I've seen you, Ed, since the Hauptmann trial" . . . The veteran Woods has struck on a highly colorful idea in this nightly selection of a jury from the audience itself . . . Probably Burns Mantle can go back some years in theatrical history and exhibit some other play which used a similar device, but it is new to this generation of Broadwayites . . . The "jurors" each get a check of $3 for their services, $1 an act . . . I recommend to the court that these checks, instead of being given to the jurors, be turned over to the Actors Fund or some such stage charity . . . That is what Ricardo Cortez and myself did the other night, and I know that other jurors would be happy to do the same, if Al Woods or Galen Bogue called it to their attention.

You know the old wheeze that difference of opinion makes horse races. It also makes readers.

Dear Sullivan: In Thursday's column, you take it upon your own misguided shoulders to tell a vast audience that Max Baer lacked courage. You confuse the real issue—you quote from history about those who fought to the bitter end, but refuse to sanction other famous incidents as: "He who fights and runs away." Your article is mere trivia—the concrete fact lives in the blindness of such men as Sam Langford. He took it and went blind.

J. D. SOMMERS.

Dear Ed: Your article occasioned by the Baer-Louis fight was a masterpiece; it had grandeur, beauty, sublimity—in a word it was a classic. The grand old scholarly editors of the old days, who must have been turning in their graves at the drivel you columnists turn out, can now rest quietly in their silent abodes and say: "We live again." The night you wrote that, generations of Irish poets stood by your side.

NINA MacDONALD.

Elaine Barrie, penning the story of her love affair with John Barrymore, at least is accurate. She writes that the first newspaper report linking her to Barrymore was a story in this column. I had spotted them at the Cotton Club and cracked the story the next day. Her mother, she confides, was very pleased because I referred to the "two lookers" with Jacko.

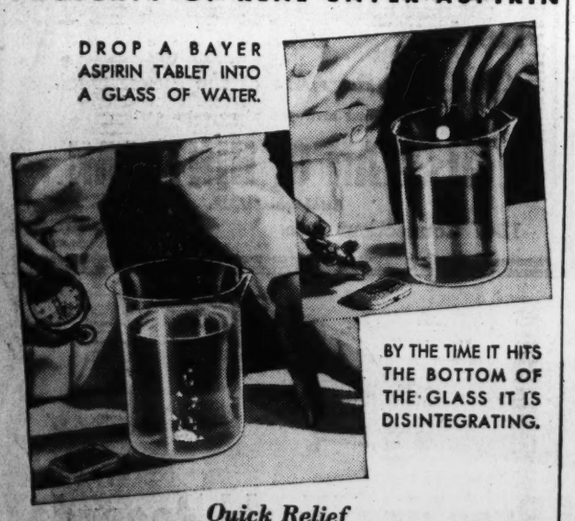
TO LET YOU SEE THE QUICK-ACTING PROPERTY OF REAL BAYER ASPIRIN

DROP A BAYER ASPIRIN TABLET INTO A GLASS OF WATER.



BY THE TIME IT HITS THE BOTTOM OF THE GLASS IT IS DISINTEGRATING.

Quick Relief from Headaches, pains of rheumatism, neuritis

The old adage says, "what you see you believe." So the scientist, pictured above, shows you two actual photographs to prove the quick action of Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN.

Look at them, and you will see one reason why Scientists rate BAYER ASPIRIN among the fastest agents, now known or ever known, for the relief of headaches and pains of neuritis, neuralgia and rheumatism.

You'll see that a Bayer Aspirin tablet, dropped into a glass of water, starts to disintegrate, or dissolve, before it hits the bottom of the glass. Hence, is ready to go to work almost instantly you take one. For what happens in that glass happens in your stomach when you take a BAYER ASPIRIN tablet. Relief comes in few minutes.

Countless thousands know that about BAYER ASPIRIN. Know by experience that it brings the quick relief you want when in distress.

Keep this in mind the next time your work or play is handicapped by a bad headache, neuritis or rheumatic pain. And ask for Bayer Aspirin by its full name "BAYER ASPIRIN" when you buy. Learn for yourself how fast you can get relief.

Suicide Note Left To Guide Searchers

By the Associated Press.

Frostburg, Md., Oct. 1.—A bullet wound in the temple, the body of Charles D. Grover, 50, a native of Baltimore, was recovered today from a reservoir, where a note he left said he would be found.

Searchers who had been looking for Grover since early morning found the body. A pistol was tied to his wrist. Coroner George P. Paulman issued a certificate of suicide.

A letter signed by Grover was received today at the hotel where he operated a barber shop. The note said that if anyone inquired for him, his body would be found in an old reservoir on the National highway a mile from here. His automobile parked near the reservoir had led to the discovery of his body earlier.

C. J. Kirkley Suicide, Letter Shows Illness

Leaving a note asking police to notify a cousin living in Baltimore, Md., Charles J. Kirkley, 48, killed himself yesterday with illuminating gas in his home, 1080 Thirty-first street northwest.

Kirkley's body was found slumped over the kitchen table with all gas jets on the stove open. He was found by Officer E. E. Ditto, of the Seventh Precinct, who was called by a neighbor.

A letter found in the man's effects, from a cousin, sympathized with him for his illness and urged him to see a priest.

On The Air Today

IT'S another big day for the Washington Society of Dial Twisters.

The world series is with us once again, Fred Allen is back in "Town Hall Tonight," Burns and Allen have a new sponsor and a new show, Conrad Thibault begins his first show as star in his own right, Chesterfield concerts return and Gordon Hittenmark takes off on a new series of sidewalk interviewing.

And that's enough to keep any listener interested: Sports, variety, comedy, the serious and a novelty feature.

* * * *

Fred Allen will be greeted by the cream of the prize winners when he takes charge of "Town Hall Tonight" after a summer of picture making. Outstanding amateur winners have been recalled to share time with the "Mayor of Bedlamville," although Portland Hoffa, the "Mighty Allen Art Players," the quartet and Peter Van Steeden and the orchestra all have prominent parts to play in this first of the winter series. In fact, Fred promises a "drammer" by the Art Players and one of his news reels. The time and the station are the same: WRC, at 9.

* * * *

Many of Frank Crumit's friends will miss him in "Town Hall Tonight," where he has been master-of-ceremonies in Fred Allen's absence, but that has been well looked after. Immediately following the Allen program tonight, WRC at 10, "Log Cabin Revue" makes its debut, with Crumit as master-of-ceremonies, and starring Conrad Thibault. "Log Cabin Revue" is billed as a half hour of popular songs and tunes in a modern tavern setting. Thibault will be supported by a mixed chorus; Eva Taylor, colored songstress, Harry Salter and his orchestra and other vocalists. Thibault continues in "Show Boat."

The Local NYA.

The many Washingtonians who are sympathetic with the advertised concept of the National Youth Administration will soon see the theory put into practice in the District. Commissioner Allen, local NYA administrator, has announced his choice of directors and preliminary organization plans for the Washington agency.

The names of the "consultants" appointed to supervise the six branches of the local organization are such as to encourage confidence. There is Mrs. Doyle, of the Board of Education; Dr. Marvin, of George Washington University, and Dr. Bocock, of Gallinger Hospital, to name but three. All are of highest repute in their fields, but unfortunately it does not necessarily follow that they are thus qualified to undertake the difficult assignment of finding places for youth in a world already baffled by the problem of adult unemployment. Explicitly, can Dr. Bocock, the highly successful superintendent of the city's municipal hospital, permit himself the time to direct effectively the project division assigned him?

An error of omission is more glaring. Although the NYA is designed to provide assistance and employment for boys and girls between the ages of 16 and 25, no representative of either the local or national employment service appears on the list of directors. Yet between one-quarter and one-third of those registered with this public placement agency are persons between the ages of 16 and 25. It is this category of the unemployed that presents the most baffling problem to the Nation generally, yet no specialist on juvenile employment is named to the local committee.

In Union Is Strength.

More than a surface significance attaches to tonight's mass meeting, at Constitution Hall, under the auspices of the Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital. The theme to be discussed is "Religious Loyalty Under a Democracy;" the speakers will include the Secretary of State, and the gathering will receive the active support of Catholic, Jewish, Orthodox and Protestant congregations.

A somewhat similar meeting was held recently in New York, but was there largely sponsored by laymen. Here the clergy initiate the movement. It is said to be the first time that all the ecclesiastical forces of a great community have been thus led toward a common platform to emphasize in unison the importance of spiritual faith in civic life, while leaving the choice of creed to the conscience of the individual.

The necessity of religion in any form of civilized society was once regarded as axiomatic. Such mass affirmation as is now proposed is novel only in so far as it stresses the note of toleration to forward common ends. The liberty of conscience which each creed properly demands for its own adherents can best be maintained, in a world trend toward regimentation, by unified demonstrations of that complete religious tolerance which has always been characteristic of America.

Auctioning An Empire.

A bid of $3,121,000 for shares of the Alleghany Corporation, carrying control of a $3,000,000,000 railroad system, has enabled the Van Sweringens to regain control of a vast railway network. The shares are part of a block of securities sold at auction by a banking syndicate. They had been held as collateral to secure a defaulted loan made to Van Sweringen holding companies. The lending bankers have sustained heavy losses, but the borrowers' default has not been without its compensations, although one of the lucky purchasers is reported to have said, "I would rather have paid the bill."

The Senate committee which is charged with an investigation of railroad financing is reported to be greatly interested in this transfer of control over thousands of miles of mid-continental railways. It is a proceeding that certainly should not be permitted to pass unnoticed by a Congress intent upon constructively correcting the evils of holding-company organization.

In this case there appears to be good ground for doubting whether the public welfare has been sufficiently considered in permitting control of vast properties to be shifted to and fro for a consideration that is negligible compared to the value of the assets involved. The present owners, moreover, have not regained control because of their ability to steer clear of financial difficulties.

There is something very questionable about a financial system which enables any man or group of men to obtain control over a great railroad network in this manner. The auctioning of the Allegany Corporation shares calls attention to an extreme case of financial pyramiding, but it is after all a typical one. In many respects, our regulatory laws applied to railways are harsh and discriminatory. Notwithstanding, the liberty allowed in organization for financial control can be excessive, as the present instance clearly testifies.

At Boulder Dam.

It is difficult to tell what clear thought, if any, lay behind the President's dedicatory address at Boulder Dam. In large part, of course, it was a tribute, both graceful and eloquent, to those who visualized, engineered and executed this majestic conservancy project. Even the slight tendency to give credit to the New Deal for an undertaking begun under the Coolidge Administration was easy to understand. But confusion was uppermost when Mr. Roosevelt sought to draw from the occasion those homilies in which he takes such delight.

There was, for instance, an apparent intent to justify WPA undertakings by the assertion that the little governmental enterprises "costing only a millionth part of Boulder Dam" are not to be questioned because of their unspectacular character. This thesis completely dodges the real issue, which is not the relative cost of the public project, but the care and foresight which have gone into its initiation.

Boulder Dam, as the President pointed out, has been most carefully planned. It is a self-liquidating project which will pay for itself in 50 years. It is the sort of project which the President has in effect told Secretary Ickes we don't want more of. Yet Mr. Roosevelt did not hesitate to cite it as an implicit justification for WPA boondoggling.

A similar uncertainty attaches to the meaning of the statement that: "we have come to the point where private industry must bear the principal responsibility of keeping the processes of greater employment moving forward with accelerated speed." We have indeed come to that point, as the failure of the Administration's efforts to provide employment by direct State action amply attests. But if industry is to be held responsible where the New Deal has failed, why should the "yardstick" theory, with its implication of continued encroachment upon the field of private industry, be emphasized in almost the same breath?

It is an inferior quality of leadership which seeks to arrogate to itself credit for all successes, while cheerfully passing to others the responsibility for failures. The President was in happier vein when he told his Los Angeles audience, yesterday, that "the way to make progress is to build on what we have, to take from the lessons of yesterday a little more wisdom and courage to the tasks of today."

If this excellent precept had been more universally practiced by the Administration the progress toward recovery would have been more secure, and the bill payable in the future would be less staggering.

For Flicker Fans.

Mack Swain, who died recently, was at the height of his fame when Mabel Normand, Ford Sterling and Fred Mace were just beginning to shine in the starry firmament. Humor was broader in those days and custard pies gave no hint of the genius which Chaplin was later to develop. A girl in a park, a masher, a futile policeman, and a biscuit-roller wife were the ingredients for two-thirds of the comic pictures when Swain was signed up by Mack Sennett. Playing "Mr. Ambrose" opposite Chester Conklin's "Mr. Walrus," Mack Swain's great avoirdupois and greater mustache were sufficient in themselves to merit a flicker following.

Back in the days when D. W. Griffith was looked upon as a Croesus because he could afford to offer $15 for the best split-reel comedy idea, threee types of motion-picture actors were forging to the front. Those were the Kalem two-gun men, the Sennett pie-throwers, and the Biograph beauties. Vitagraph was also regarded as somewhat of a formidable competitor by reason of their "Life of Moses," which they released in five reels, one reel at a time.

Along about 1913 the ideal picture-show program consisted of a honeyed 'way-down-Eastern, a virile 'way-out-Western and a custard comedy. Perhaps Mack Swain and Chester Conklin realized that it could not be many years before they would valiantly be making custard's last stand against comedy of a less insistent crudity. Mack Swain is gone, but "Mr. Ambrose" lives on in the memory of everyone who ever saw him hurl a custard pie.

Time For Real Science.

Application of the tested laws of psychology to alleviation of human distress probably was never more necessary than today. Since such a statement could truthfully have been made at earlier periods of history, it might be deduced that the ever-increasing complexity of living requires constantly new clarifications. The deduction merely confirms what common sense would indicate.

As Dr. A. T. Poffenberger, of Columbia University, told the American Psychology Association recently, the true science of psychology, involving as it does man's physical evolution as well as his mental equilibrium, has a challenge in the continual need of mankind to be adjusted to the current social order. The surfeit of attendant quackery which sometimes makes the very word "psychology" suspect does not make the problem easier.

Setting white-collar workers who are on relief to charting serious studies in occupational and emotional misplacements need not necessarily be classed as "boondoggling." Here, true psychology has a chance for practical application. It ties in closely with other sciences less theoretical, perhaps more tangible, in diagnosing man's ills and evolving cures. The part psychology can play in adjusting men and women to an ever-renewing world, wherein too rapid changes have swept many persons from their moorings, cannot be overemphasized.

Serious studies in sex turbulences, in marital affinities, in spiritual digressions, in all sorts of emotional problems are never more worth while than in a period of economic unrest to which disordered mental processes so alarmingly contribute. But the need for ridding psychology of half-baked theories is just as acute. Unfortunately charlatanism is likely to be encouraged by treating the very treacherous field of psychological research as a fit subject for work-relief experiments.

Wishing vs. Planning.

An illustration of the service a planning agency can render is implicit in the report handed recently to the National Resources Committee by one of its advisory groups. It suggests the expenditure of $15,000,000 to rid the Potomac River of pollution both as a sanitary and conservation measure and, more significantly, as an experiment by which other river basins may plot similar campaigns throughout the country.

In view of the Administration's current hostility to projects of long-range value, it is doubtful whether the plan can be expected to materialize within the near future. However, the report has great potential value. To appreciate it, memory must recall the generalities of a year ago regarding the practicability and necessity of control of pollution. The report now before the National Resources Committee is an echo from those days, but in place of the original talk there now is heard a careful and deliberate proposal.

Some concept of the complexities of pollution elimination is now given. The Potomac is far from being the largest river in this country, yet its basin comprises some 14,000 square miles and the population within its watershed approaches 1,300,000. Purification of its waters is not to be accomplished at a mere nod from Washington. Such a vast undertaking involves the cooperation of each of the municipalities, counties and States through which the river flows.

The District sewage-treatment plant now under construction, the new Arlington County sewer lines, the mines recently closed along the upper reaches of the river, are all examples of work already undertaken to improve the Potomac's complexion. But these are only details of the full picture. It remained for the special advisers of the National Resources Committee to describe the whole problem and to suggest an integrated solution for it. The value of such a planning agency is obvious.

An Old Turkish Custom.

As one result of their campaign for "feminine equality," the women of Turkey have won the right to be conscripted for the army—the privilege of fighting in the ranks. "Re-won" would be the more precise term; the ancient ancestresses of these modern Ottoman ladies took military service as a matter of course; even in later days Turkish women shouldered muskets. But the custom lapsed; it has remained for the Ankara government to revive it.

Now, whether it represents progress or a reversal to savage tradition, Kemal suavely yields. Perhaps he is merely giving the movement a whirl. Perhaps he feels that, when it has reached the ultimate of what these feminists call equality, they will once more yearn for the unprotected status which they today look back upon as submergence. However this may be, the progressive Turkish woman has, for the moment, gone her American sister one better.

In this country mere men cannot understand why the female of the species should complain of "inequality" merely because she isn't put at locomotive throttles, and is discouraged from plowing. To such intractable critics as Dr. Harrison L. Aspenwall and other recent correspondents of the Post-Impressionist, it is puzzling that "organized women" should militantly combat protective labor laws and call solicitude "subjection."

At a recent New England knitting bee a man took honors, and the women were spiritedly disconcerted. None of them denied his "right" to knit, but he was the only one to get much fun out of his victory. The day may yet dawn when Dr. Aspenwall—when even Kemal—will indorse a campaign seeking "equality" for men.

The Memorial To Will Rogers.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

The Will Rogers Memorial Association, under the chairmanship of Vice President Garner, shows wise judgment in deciding that whatever form the memorial takes it "shall bespeak the simplicity of Will Rogers himself." Certainly no sweeping imagination is required to picture the humorist delightedly debunking any memorial to himself that might partake of the grand, the solemn, the pompous.

As to its location, the memorial might logically be placed, not in the Oklahoma of Will Rogers' birth, not in the New York of his stage career nor in the Hollywood of his film epoch, but in the Washington which inspired his satiric masterpieces. In the daily presence of a permanent symbol of the Rogers irony it is faintly possible that Congressmen and Government chiefs might eventually come to seek the acquisition of a modicum of the common sense which Rogers possessed in such abundance.

England's Interest.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: National policies are usually selfish, but governments may be motivated by enlightenened self-interest which benefits rather than injures other countries. C. F. T. in your letter column now makes the flat assertion that Lake Tana is "the all-important fact" in the British attitude toward the Italian conquest of Ethiopia. He does not see the whole picture.

Russia, France, Belgium, etc., are supporting the peace machinery. Why? Do they covet Lake Tana? They want to establish an international system of security. So does England. Last June 11,356,000 British voted on a "peace ballot," and 10,088,000 voted in favor of the general proposition of applying economic sanctions," if a nation insists on attacking another," and 6,748,000 voted in favor of military sanctions, if necessary. The English know the cost of war and the value of peace; they also know that peace is not made secure by scuttling away from war as Uncle Sam is now doing.

If Italian seizure of Lake Tana automatically stopped the rain and cut off the rivers flowing into Egypt, C. F. T.'s argument would be good. But there is no immediate threat to Egypt's water supply. Italy hasn't conquered Ethiopia and may go bankrupt if she tries it. Italy has pledged herself in the agreement of 1925 and ever since to safeguard British rights to the waters of Lake Tana. Italy could not divert the water without spending years at the job, during which the British could take action. This threat to British interests is remote and speculative.

England's immediate and vital interest is in establishing and maintaining a system of international pressure against any country which disturbs the peace. That also is a vital interest of the United States. This would be clear if shortsighted and sentimental pacifists did not outshout all others in the United States. As the editor of The Post so well said on September 28, the path of American statesmanship is clearly "to support the forces which are working to avert war. Such a policy, moreover, involves no risk whatsoever for the United States. The only risk lies in giving tacit approval to a philosophy of aggressiveness which if unchecked now, will not always be a matter of even pretended indifference to us."

A Happy Summer.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Through the columns of your excellent paper, I wish to thank the District Playground Association, especially the one in Chevy Chase. I am a grandmother and very proud of it, but when three small grandchildren descended upon me for the summer months, I confess I was rather at a loss to entertain them, as there seemed a dearth of children in my neighborhood. After two rather hectic weeks I heard of the playground and we at once took the children, even the littlest one.

It has been a happy and profitable summer for the three. Swimming, sewing, dancing and basket work occupied their time. I am the proud possessor of a pretty wastepaper basket, which took a blue ribbon and was very neatly made by a 10-year-old. The young ladies in attendance were most efficient and my family is very grateful for the District playground.

Encroaching Socialism?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems to me an inescapable conclusion that present plans of the Administration contemplate the introduction of Socialism in America, under a very definite and systematic course. The program to come is so easily deducible from various accomplished political facts that one marvels to find how little it is discussed in organs of well-informed political opinion. So far, I have seen no published reference to this program, except in a single paragraph appearing recently in the United States News.

On page 2, in its issue of September 9, that paper says: "The New Deal financial planners have their eyes on pay roll taxes to support the new old-age insurance plan as a source of funds for maintaining a 'third economy' in the future . . . Planners think that the money can give jobs on large-scale public works to absorb the industrial unemployed in the future."

This item appears as "gossip"—no more. But what a tremendous social revolution is hinted at in those few words!

Are we to believe that the "financial planners" mentioned have only recently stumbled upon the idea of coordinating unemployment relief expenditures with their projected (an unconstitutional) pay roll taxes? To do so would be just a little too naive, I think.

It is far more probable, in my humble opinion, that preparations for the maintenance of this fantastic "third economy" began long before the last session of Congress—certainly before the social security bill received its first publicity. One requires little imagination, I believe, to see how the pay roll tax-rate can, in future, be almost painlessly increased, bit by bit, with the result that our society can be gradually, unconsciously, diluted with the essence of Marxism.

Economists with whom I have discussed the matter are (as usual with the species), chary about commenting. I submit that this matter should have the attention of every citizen reared under the old American traditions.

A Question Of Morals.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To the letter in The Post of September 27, signed by "Decency," I want to say Amen. The same thought occurred to me when passing the theater yesterday as I gazed momentarily upon those indecent, vulgar and obscene pictures, and I wondered why such things were permitted in a city which was supposed to guard the morals of its citizens.

As a leader of youth and a teacher of character and citizenship, I realize the temptation and resultant evil which may come into the life of a boy who is subjected to such exposures, and hence I would call upon the Police Department to close up this den.

Roosevelt And Kentucky.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am asking for enough space in your valued paper to express the opinion of one Kentuckian on the wild and in some instances purposeful misrepresentations of the relationship of President Roosevelt to the so-called rift among Democrats in Kentucky.

In the first place, the Roosevelt Administration is not remotely connected with the factional disputes in Kentucky Democratic politics. I am familiar with every county in the State and have made personal visits into more than half of them within the last ten months. Any man in Kentucky, either a Democrat or a Republican, will tell you that the conflict for the control of the Democratic Party in Kentucky has been waged for years, off and on.

The only expression, that I am aware of, that ever came from President Roosevelt and had any bearing upon the party conflict was his letter favoring a direct party primary for choosing the candidates for the State offices, if the people wanted that method of choosing the candidates. Did the people want that method of choosing them? There is not a question in the minds of the people on that subject. A poll of public opinion on that subject was taken by outstanding newspapers in every section of the State and the verdict was more than 90 per cent in favor of a direct primary.

The leading citizens in every walk of life urged a direct primary instead of the convention method of selecting the candidates. In fact, the people were so emphatic on that subject that it meant disaster to the party ticket this fall if their wishes were ignored. Senators Barkley and Logan went strong for a primary, and Senator Barkley made a personal trip to Kentucky to attend the party committee meeting to urge their voting for a primary and remove any doubt in the minds of the people. He brought with him a letter from President Roosevelt, as the head of the Democratic Party in the whole country, emphasizing the importance of giving the people the right to exercise their democratic privilege of choosing their nominee, if they want to do it. He just recommended that it was the democratic thing to do if the people wanted it done that way.

That was high statesmanship and the act of a great leader. Roosevelt is not held for any part of the trouble in Kentucky by the people of that State. They are for him now and will give him an overwhelming majority next year. The split in Kentucky is among two factions of the Democratic Party, both of which are back of Roosevelt and will be found in the field and on the stump for him next year. I believe the opinion of some papers in Washington is honest and that it has been interpreted that the President had taken an undue hand in Kentucky affairs. But there are unscrupulous papers in this city that would print a misrepresentation on the President if they knew emphatically that it was a lie.

Yours for honest and constructive journalism that will give true facts to the reading public and not garbled editorialized propaganda that has stretched the truth beyond recognition.

Was Buffon Really Wrong?

Post Office, Wednesday.

EVER since Anne Douglas Sedgwick died last summer we have been waiting—vainly—for some critic to say that with her ended, except for Edith Wharton, those novelists who owed their style to Henry James.

We opened "The Rescue" at random and read:

"At such moments, he could see in her eyes that caressed one, made sweet amends to one, touches of what must have once been enchanting roguishness."

James might have written every word of "The Rescue." The theme of "The Rescue" could have been hit upon by nobody who had not read James.

So we have waited for a discussion of his once farspread influence—vainly. And we have in vain waited for this to reverse the modern reversal of Buffon's declaration that the style is the man.

* * *

"Now," you will say, "you are thinking of James' Second Manner."

Well, despite all the facile talk there used to be about it, we wonder if there really ever was a Second Manner of Henry James.

* * *

As his career approached its end, each of his new novels was preceded by a publisher-inspired rumor that he was returning to the so-called unclouded pages which were held to have begun with the fair sunrise of "Daisy Miller" and to have ended in the even more glamorous twilight of the untellable things that "Masie" knew. Since the closing words of "The Tragic Muse" had been written, his work had become more and more interesting to the elder literary specialist, to the professional psychologist—less and less interesting to the passing reader, and to his publishers fatal. The announcements of a return always awakened hope among the light and commercial-minded.

But now, looking backward, we see that the hope was forever disappointed. We wonder whether it is ever possible for any artist to retrace the stylistic road that he has painstakingly followed.

* * *

In the perspective of a decade ago, there was reason to believe that James, for his part, had frequently wanted to return, but that, like a character in one of his own "Embarrassments," the debated second manner had become the master. In the perspective of today, there is good reason to believe that that manner was a logical development of tendencies inherent in James at his beginning.

* * *

Even "An International Episode" shows a growing passion for tone-color. The style of "The Portrait of a Lady" is the direct result of the Grail-quest for the proper word. Carefully studied, "The Siege of London," "The Bostonians," "The Princess Cassamassima"—all the novels to "The Awkward Age"—display the progress of what might be called an esthetic evolution, a process of refinement, which finally made James the most prominent figure among the stylists in those days which seem to have been the last days of English style.

* * *

That is saying a great deal. It is saying a great deal of even those days. It is saying more of the present. But it is said only to those with genuine taste in literature.

For manner lives when matter passes. A style may become antiquated—it can retain c h a r m. Themes, on the other hand, are outmoded with their generation; they lose interest to new interests.

* * *

The longer one lives and reads both life and books, the smaller wanes one's concern—in both books and life—for what a man says: it is concern for the way he says it that grows stronger. If the style is not all of the author, it at least is (if it be good style) that part of him, or that consciously chosen disguise, a b o u t which the sophisticated reader really cares.

To each of us, that is, there comes an ultimate period — generally a period of increased intellectual activity—when he ceases to be particularly curious concerning what other men have to say of the philosophy of life, because he has already acquired his philosophy, or shaped his own life.

Thus the individual. And what is true of him is true of the race.

* * *

But, presuming that a book is the work of art, the way in which the philosophy is presented, the manner in which the story is told, is an entirely different affair. About that the reader is perpetually curious, because he has there, continually presented, the working-out of the greatest of artistic problems, the problem that is at the bottom of them all: the giving, as Barrett Wendell well put it, "of a material body to some reality which till that moment was immaterial"—the expression from the author and to the reader of a spiritual entity by a means that, at its very best, must be crudely material.

* * *

Assuredly Buffon was right.
Assuredly he justifies James.
And assuredly one of the Sedgwick memoirists should have said so.

Fair Enough

Memories of '34.

Detroit, Oct. 1.

THE people of Detroit gave a fine world series show last fall, including a spirited riot by the left-field constituency, so it is a pleasure to approach a renewal on the same premises and with approximately the same social and professional cast. That was the world series which brought Mr. Henry Ford venturing rather timidly out of his lamasery to mingle with the people of whom he had been one so long ago and discover them not at all unfriendly.

Mr. Ford sat in at the ball yard, crunching peanuts and laughing with the late Will Rogers, his favorite jester, who mouthed his gum and flopped his bang, uttering dry humor and signing his name to any scrap of paper that was shoved into his hand, thousands of times all told. Mr. Rogers is gone, which is a pity, for the people worshiped him and made him a greater hero than both ball clubs combined, and even the newspaper lads could be seen in the evening coming at him with their souvenir programs and borrowed fountain pens.

It was a strange experience the night before the series began to attend a sort of civic dinner in honor of Mickey Cochrane, the Tigers' manager and catcher, at the Detroit Athletic Club and discover among the guests who rallied 'round to honor a ball player, and through him his team, miscellaneous Fords, in person, and other and lesser members of the automobile royalty. There have been many world series in New York, for example, but neither J. P. Morgan nor any member of the house thereof has ever been detected either at a game or at the more frivolous night side rites.

In Washington the current President customarily attends the opening game, usually as a concession to tradition and without apparent enthusiasm, but never sits in at the speeches and toasts of the night before. In St. Louis world series have become routine disturbances, like fires in the stockyards, and Chicago and Philadelphia are equally self-possessed on like occasions.

• • • •

BUT Detroit accepted the winning of the American League pennant by Mr. Cochrane and his men as a star on the report card of a great city, and the biggest man in town was not too big to acknowledge their achievement. To those of us who a few years ago schemed and angled about Detroit, hoping to get just a look at the great, mysterious oracle of progress and business, usually without success, it was a distinct surprise to see Mr. Ford at a ball game. It seemed that the coming of the world series to Detroit had done as much good for him personally as for the players on the field.

For years he had spoken only in the muffled tones of formal, edited interviews given by appointment, and then only to high executives of the newspaper industry. He had walked through the Sunday pictures in the company of Edison, Firestone and Coolidge. He was a fabulous figure, bloodless as a monument and no more human than electricity, neither beloved nor hated but just a great force in the universe.

• • • •

THEN Mr. Ford heard that a world series was coming to his town, asked somebody what a world series might be and decided to have a look at the people at one of their great tribal celebrations. The people, on their part, got a look at Mr. Ford, and the impression seems to have been mutually good, for it is reported that he is coming back this year, and no objections have been heard from the common man.

Mr. Cochrane, though he had recently been a stranger in town, now found himself a distinguished and honored citizen of Detroit. There were light ceremonies that night at the Athletic Club, and Mr. Cochrane, hoisting himself to his feet, hauled off and threw the assembled fine ladies and gentlemen of the automobile dynasty a neat, swift speech with a hook on the end which might have come out of a book—so well it spoke the spirit of a rising young executive.

There were a half dozen Fords of varying degrees among those present and whole bundles of earls and barons of the longer wheel-bases. Their ladies clapped and bowed, and Mickey Cochrane's lady clapped and bowed in return as the orations went flapping through the air like birds of paradise. It was the greatest social occasion in the history of organized baseball, and not a bad adventure for the Ford family, either, as it gave them at last a fingerhold on the lapel of the ordinary man, per Mickey Cochrane.

• • • •

IT would be too much to expect this year a repetition of the wild and furious but harmless disorder which broke out when Mr. Ducky Medwick, of the St. Louis Gas House gang, slid into third one afternoon and lay on his back in the dust clawing at Marvin Owen with his spikes. That was something spontaneous and special, and if it happened again might necessitate funerals, grand juries and triple probes, as we say in the papers.

The Detroit customers in the left field waited until Medwick came out to field his position, then rushed down to the chicken wire barrier gnashing their fangs and hurling bottles, fruit and other missiles in a truly alarming portrayal of the way mobs act when their mad is up. It lasted 30 minutes, more or less, more savage each minute, and Mr. Medwick would have been torn limb from limb and beaten to death with the gory stumps of his own arms if the chicken wire had not held fast until Judge Landis tactfully ordered him out of the contest. At that a dangerous demonstration of mob craziness was neatly converted into a few paragraphs of interesting by-play, and Detroit's World Series ended with profit to many and pleasure and benefit to all.

Smoking

By William Lyon Phelps

HOW many of my readers can remember the time when special costumes were worn when smoking tobacco? Smokers dressed for it as they do today for tennis, golf and other things.

When I was a small boy, a lady in Scotland presented my father with a blue velvet skull cap, with splendid gold trimmings, saying it was a smoking cap. My father liked it and often wore it indoors, though he never smoked.

Then came the smoking jacket. I wish I knew when appeared for the first time in the French language the single word, "Smoking," meaning dinner coat, sometimes the whole dinner suit, often in America called a tuxedo.

• • • •

And now the Right Rev. David Homer Blair, baronet, Catholic priest, Abbot of Dunfermline, author of many books, graduate of Eton and Magdalen College, Oxford, and over 80 years of age, has a delightful letter about tobacco in one of the London papers, to which the editor gave the heading:

Tobacco and Women.

He says he has often meditated writing an article on the "Evolution of the Smoking Room," founded on his experience of over 70 years in a great Scottish country house. I hope he will write a book about it.

The idea, of course, was that the ladies would not be offended by the odor of tobacco, as they might have been had the men smoked in their ordinary clothes. Times have changed.

The Road To Peace

World Must Appreciate Need For Revisions, Writer Stresses.

Hope Lies In Leaders Who Will Restrain Ambitions.

The following excerpts from an article in the current Atlantic Monthly do much to provide an answer to the question: Why War In A World Which Desires Peace? The points raised by Mr. Dulles, who was secretary of the The Hague Peace Conference of 1907 and counsel to the American Commission to Negotiate Peace in 1918-19, are given particular timeliness by the position now taken by the British government. In his note to the French ambassador in London, Sir Samuel Hoare on Sunday stated that "elasticity is a part of security and every member of the League must recognize, as the Covenant itself recognizes, that the world is not static."

By John Foster Dulles.

IT is bewildering that the world should again be moving toward war. We know that we ourselves want peace and we feel that peoples everywhere at heart desire it. Throughout the world, statesmen proclaim their devotion to the cause of peace. Not only by word but by formal compact they have bound their nations to peace as never before.

Faced by a situation which superficially seems so inexplicable, we adopt the time-honored expedient of postulating a "personal devil." Hitler, Mussolini and Japanese war lords in turn become the object of our suspicion, or we visualize an international ring of munition makers plotting war for their personal profit. We forget that isolated individuals could never prevail against world sentiment for peace, except as they are the instrumentalities of powerful underlying forces. It is these which we must identify and counteract, otherwise we are striking at shadows, leaving untouched the solid realities that cause them.

The true explanation of the imminence of war lies in the inevitability of change and the fact that peace efforts have been misdirected toward the prevention of change. Thereby forces which are in the long run irresistible are temporarily dammed up. When they finally break through they do so with violence.

AS WE must accept the inevitability of change, so also we must recognize that force, actual or potential, has historically proved to be the only mechanism which can be relied upon to effect international changes. Within the state, a solution has measurably been found. A superior force—government—has been set up which assures internal peace by repressing force on the one hand, and on the other hand establishing conditions under which change readily occurs. The latter is as essential as the former. No community has eliminated internal strife without at the same time providing mechanisms whereby the material and social status of its members alters in some relation to their deserts. Wealth, power, and position constantly change. Fortunes made by economy, foresight and industry are lost by profligacy, stupidity and idleness. Prestige and influence are lost by incompetence and unworthy discharge of responsibility. In a society where the occurrence of such changes was blocked, which decreed the perpetual dominance of a particular group irrespective of its merit, internal violence could not be avoided. The French and Russian revolutions illustrate how denial of opportunity inevitably provokes forcible revolt.

When we turn, however, to the community of nations, we find no superstate qualified to repress war and to order a state of affairs such that international changes can occur without the pressure of force by one member upon another. In international law, each state is "sovereign." Its status is fixed by treaties which generally run in perpetuity. No changes can lawfully be made without the consent of all parties. Such unanimous consent is rare, since nations, like individuals, are not prone to recognize their own decline, or the increased merits or needs of others, and voluntarily make abatements accordingly. The most deep-rooted instinct is the instinct to relinquish only when compelled to do so. Thus, in the field of international affairs, change and force are largely synonymous. History clearly shows that it is force, or the threat of force, which principally accounts for the evolution of the world to its present state.

PEACE plans, if they are to be effective, must be constructed so as to take into account these two fundamental facts—namely, the inevitability of change, and the present lack of any adequate substitute for force as an inducement to change. Every peace project should be tested by this inquiry: if its pledges are scrupulously and honorably observed, will there exist any adequate means to assure for the future changes comparable to those which history has shown to be both inevitable and desirable in the past? Unless this inquiry can be answered in the affirmative, the project will fail. It will, indeed, be actually provocative of war.

The most instructive lesson in how peace is maintained is furnished by the development of the British Empire. Once England fought to maintain her authority over colonies geographically distant and independent in spirit. Since then the inevitability of change has been accepted and there has occurred a peaceful evolution of the British colonies and Ireland into virtually separate and independent nations. This was greatly facilitated by the avoidance of a written constitution or formal compact attempting to crystallize any given relationship between the different portions of the British Empire. No contractual obstacle was thus created to permitting change to occur in the ideal way—namely, so gradually and naturally as to be scarcely perceptible except in retrospect.

In contrast, the postwar peace efforts have, as we have seen, been uniformly based upon the projection of the present into the future. It is always an existing status which is sought to be preserved. It almost seems as though force were sought to be abolished because of its being the historic mechanism for change and in the hope that, if it could be abolished, changes would no longer occur.

• • • •

IT is not mere coincidence that it is the presently favored nations—France, Great Britain and the United States—whose governments have been most active in devising plans for perpetual peace. If other countries like Germany, Japan and Italy adhere only reluctantly, if at all, to such projects, it is not because these nations are inherently warlike or bloodthirsty. They, too, want peace, but they undoubtedly feel within themselves potentialities which are repressed and they desire to keep open the avenues of change. They appraise the "peace" plans presented to them as schemes to eliminate the only effective mechanism of change.

Since it is the powerful, self-satisfied nations which exercise the initiative in international affairs, it is not surprising that there has not been put forward any major program which seeks peace through the framework of change. The nearest approach in Article XIX of the Covenant of the League of Nations.

This provision at least recognizes the problem of change. It suggests a peaceful mechanism for change—namely, an international tribunal empowered to propose the revision of the treaties (boundary, and so forth) which now establish the relative position of nations in the world. President Wilson, at Paris, gave frequent indications that he accepted certain territorial and financial settlements which were pressed on him by the Allies because, in return, he was getting from them a mechanism for the peaceful revision of these and other settlements which might prove inequitable. This was, perhaps, visionary, but it was a splendid vision.

New Company Formed Ti Liquidate W. B. & A.

Baltimore, Oct. 1 (AP).—The collapse of the old Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis Railroad echoed in another quarter today, when a new company was chartered to liquidate some of the real estate and personal property of the road.

The new company is the Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis Realty Corporation. It was formed by Lawrence Perin, Bradley T. J. Mette, jr., and Arthur C. Griffith, all of Baltimore.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

Chess And Mr. Strachey.

IN the ancient and honorable game of chess, it does you no good to call your opponent low names, to express a dislike for his beard or the company he keeps, or to claim loudly that you could beat him 40 ways from Christmas at bridge. When he makes a strong, strategic move, you must make an answer on the board to that move and that alone.

In the same way, we get nowhere when we merely reply to Mr. John Strachey: "Yah! Communist!" Even the immigration authorities in Chicago, who arrested and then acquitted him last spring, knew better than that. For Mr. Strachey, using the system of those old maestri, Marx and Engels and Lenin, plays first-grade chess—his attacking moves are direct and sharp; his defending moves, though less clear, are yet of weight. If we can keep our coats on (chess is not played in shirt sleeves), it might be well to glance at the strength of his game.

His most redoubtable book, and the one on which his reputation as a Communist thinker is based, is "The Coming Struggle for Power." First issued in 1933, it now appears in the Modern Library "Giant" series ($1). And in this lucid, muscular and spirited volume we are given perhaps the most readable exposition in English of the Communists' chess playing.

• • • •

THEIR attacking moves must be familiar to all of us. They, including Mr. Strachey, charge right out over the board and say this of capitalism—that it advances to larger and larger monopolies in industry; that it fosters nationalism; that it finds it hard to preserve "stable money," and that it is increasingly subject to crises or depressions. And why is this good chess? Because even the most optimistic defenders of capitalism admit these points to be true.

Then, proceeding further and narrowing the attack, Mr. Strachey declares that as monopolies and trusts grow they tend to become inseparably linked and coterminous with the State; that monopoly is again indicated in the jealous hold of mother countries upon their colonies for purposes of industrial exploitation. From the trend toward intense national unities, from capitalism's need of continual expansion, and from the fact that the world is geographically filled up, he submits that the result will be a series of Fascist nations competing bitterly for the trade of the last few unindustrialized areas. Their eventual weapon, of course, will be the sword.

It is embarrassing to attempt to refute these moves because, in the plain sight of all, we have today three nations in one form or another of fascism—Germany, Italy and Japan—and a certain bellicosity is not unnoticeable. Mr. Strachey says that their obvious aggressive power will in the long run force other capitalist nations to take up fascism in self-defense, and students of history are not inclined to disagree. If so, the end result cannot be anything else but a series of wars of incomprehensible frightfulness and duration until one Big Dog capitalist nation is left supreme on earth to rule the ruins—such is the Communist chess attack.

• • • •

HAVING thus defined the moves against capitalist theory and practice, Mr. Strachey devotes but the last eighth of his book to the defense, the Communist position. He is assertive—"it (communism) is the one method by which civilization can be maintained at all," etc., and etc. And he is wily—"communism offers no one of this generation a ticket to Utopia." For when we move in, and point dismayed fingers at the crudity and incompleteness of Soviet Russia, he makes the countermove that Russia is not yet a Communist nation, but a "working class dictatorship" building the arduous foundations for true communism.

We make our one best move, then, and call Mr. Strachey's attention to the fact that, in a stupendously complex world, he and the other Communists would assert that all the ills of mankind—from the pessimism of Proust and T. S. Eliot to the unemployment of millions, from the drab, unenjoying life of the average little man to the future Armageddon of Fascist nations—are each and every one to be solved by the astounding simplicity (in idea) of transferring the means of production, the fields, factories and mines, from the hands of the capitalists to the hands of the community as a whole. Such simplicity, we are sure, does not exist on earth. And he replies: "Wait and see."

WELL, none of us can wait 200 or 2,000 years. We can play all the chess now that we have a mind to, and fate can wait until our great-grandchildren are in their graves before deciding which move is the better. As a capitalist nation we are opposed to communism, we must make our own moves, yet surely I say nothing surprising when I note that history lasts longer than nations. "What then?" ask those people who are always wanting answers.

There can be only one—we, as individuals, must live in the climate of our place and our time. But it might be well for us to remember the words of Samuel Johnson: "The Lord God Himself does not presume to judge man until the end of his days. Why should we?" It is thus, too, with nations, cultures and civilizations.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Lines for an Antinoise Drive.

An antinoise drive sweeps the land
This month and we would think it grand
If you'd ban noises tantalizing,
For instance, bathtub vocalizing!

Don't whistle during office hours!
Why blow your horn at traffic tow'rs?
With saxophones if you don't fuss,
It will be simply swell with us.

Don't put your brakes on so they screech
And do not yodel, we beseech;
If you've a child who is about
To practice music, cut it out!

Don't tell us, shot by shot, my son,
About your round in ninety-one;
(There is no noise that's more disturbing);
And golf game chatter we're for curbing.

Remember not to slam a door
Or throw your brogans on the floor,
And you can help abate the din
By not reciting Gunga Din.

Please toss away your squeaky shoes,
And must you snore so when you snooze?
Don't croon while working in your den,
And please don't use a scratchy pen!

Don't exhale loudly when you breathe,
And don't crack walnuts with your teeth;
Don't hang up pictures late at night,
And come in softly if you're tight.

The Statisticians Lend Their Weight to View That the Theater Is Looking Up

Signs Point to Banner Year as Money Loosens

Millions Spent in Movies; Hobnobbing With Great; Amusement Chatter.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

The September 28 issue of the Motion Picture Herald, foremost of the film industry's trade journals, embodies an encouraging amount of documentary evidence in corroboration of this column's frequent contention that prosperity has rounded that corner, insofar as the playhouse is concerned, and that the impending season of 1935-36, in all branches of the theater, will be one of the most productive since the financial debacle of 1929.

For instance, the Herald's investigative statisticians have discovered that in the past nine months 280 new theaters have been opened in 38 States. These new out'-'s for mass entertainment represent a capital investment of between $17,000,000 and $26,000,000 in new building in 199 cities and towns.

In addition to this "new money" for new structures, unknown additional millions have been expended throughout the country for the rehabilitation of old properties.

On the other side of the picture is the announcement that 40 major film producers have bought 679 stories for the cameras and microphones at a total cost of $3,395,000.

No Longer Copies Stage.

Fifty per cent of all purchases of story material for the year ended September 1 were originals, written directly for the screen; 37 per cent were books and only 13 per cent plays.

There would seem to be evidence here that the cinema is more and more coming to rely on its own resourcefulness and less and less depending on photographic reproduction of stage plays for box office draw at the picture-theater ticket wickets.

Repeal of so-called "blue laws" in recent months has aided 1,885 houses scattered over several States. This liberalization of laws opens up a new field of business for many theaters. It has even touched Broadway, where the first Sunday performances in years, of living drama, recently have been enjoyed—thanks largely to the indefatigable activity of the veteran William A. Brady, recently bereaved by the tragic death of his son in a cottage fire.

And that's the way it seems to be going throughout the land—more theaters, more pictures, more patronage, more profits, more fun!

You have been waiting six years for it. Now that it is here, what are you going to do with it?

In commemoration of the twentieth anniversary of Martin Quigley's entrance into the field of trade journal publication—and his has been a constructive and helpful participation during the entire span of these two formative decades—this edition of the magazine contains 370 pages, 9½ by 12¼ inches in size, which, by and large, is a right hefty document!

Packed into these voluminous pages are many nuggets of valuable information and a wealth of reminiscence of an early day in the cinema, largely contributed by Editor Terry Ramsaye, who has been a keen and vocal observer of the industry since its nickelodeon days.

The esteem in which Mr. Quigley is held by the industry is eloquently expressed by the page after page of brilliantly illuminated advertisements of new-season product run by practically all of the foremost producers of film entertainment.

We join these erudite interests in extending congratulations to Martin Quigley upon this milepost in his brilliantly successful career as the industry's most eminent mouthpiece.

Rubbing Elbows With Great.

Breakfasting and lunching with the theatrical great, one learns that unusual records are held by stars appearing in Washington this week on the stages of Loew's Fox and Warner Brothers Earle theaters.

Lou Holtz, one of Broadway's favorite raconteurs and dialecticians; Belle Baker, peer of the theater's songstresses, and Jesse Block and Eva Sully, originators of the "nitwit" type of cross-fire banter, are genial and interesting breakfast companions, as was demonstrated yesterday morning at Division Manager Carter Barron's matutinal repast in their honor in the cozy taproom of the Variety Club in the Willard Hotel.

Sitting next to Miss Baker, one picked up the information that this triple-star combination smashed all records in and around New York during seven weeks in which they attracted as high as $38,000, in a single seven-day period, to the comparatively small State Theater, and way up there over $100,000 at the commodious Capitol.

After Washington they play Baltimore, with another week to come to complete the 10 for which they were booked by the Loew offices.

Belle and the Prince.

Between Lou Holtz's gay stories and the nonsensical chatter of Miss Sully and Mr. Block, you could pick up, if you wanted to, that on her last trip abroad Miss Baker journeyed to London in the expectation of playing two weeks and remained nine months.

One night at Grosvenor House, when one of Wales' emissaries presented himself at her table and requested the next dance for the Prince, she thought she was being "ribbed" by one of the Diamond boys!

When the heir apparent to the British throne presented himself, bowed snappily from the waist and claimed the dance, you will have to ask Belle what happened. Eventually they danced!

An hour later, at the Variety Club luncheon in the spacious Willard room of Harry Somerville's tavern of the same name, sitting next Little Jack Little, headliner of this week's stage bill at the Earle, we learned that Jack and his revue have been touring since last April with 90 per cent of their bookings one-night stands in such ample States, for example, as Texas, where one-night stands are sleeper jumps apart. Since the boys motor from booking to booking, they frequently were forced to go as long as three nights at a stretch without ever seeing a bed, taking turns in rotation at sleeping on the back seat and staying awake back of the wheel.

Little's Big Bumps.

So Sunday Jack went out in a speedboat with a friend with a penchant for emulating the flying fishes and yesterday could hardly move from the bouncing around he took.

That is, he could hardly move any part of his anatomy but his hands. They regaled the assembled barkers with an original transcription of Nevin's "Mighty Lak' a Rose," on the piano, and Jack's inimitable imitation of an old broken-down, barroom player-piano.

W. A. Roberts, people's counsel, was the guest of honor and principal speaker at the luncheon—presided over by Hardie Meakin, manager of RKO-Keith's, and Dr. Frank T. Shyne, eminent neck-snapper, as "Kings for the Day"—and in an interesting and informative talk suggested numerous remedies for current traffic ills and dropped a final hint that the theater men present should find valuable.

A pleasant time was had by all—to coin a phrase.

Yesterday's mailman rang twice, twice. In addition to Mr. Quigley's commemorative magazine, he deposited on our systematically cluttered desk a miniature autographed volume, bearing the title of "The Story of Freddie Bartholomew" and written by that most erudite and charming of the theater's commentators, Helen Hoerle, author, critic, publicist and agent. The book is profusely illustrated with photographic reproductions furnished through the courtesy of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, producers of the pictures in which Master Bartholomew appears. More of this interesting brochure after we have read it.

August's B. O. Champions.

We confess to a little surprise at the rating accorded the "Box-Office Champions for August" by the Motion Picture Herald, in its bulky issue of the 28th.

Six pictures were required by the monthly recapitulation of bona-fide, key-city box-office reports to establish the identities of the five pictures deemed best in August by the theatergoers of the Nation as evidenced by their attendance at the picture theaters.

First place was won by Shirley Temple in "Curly Top," without dispute. Second and third places also were uncontested and went respectively, to "China Seas," featuring Clark Gable, Jean Harlow and Wallace Beery, and "Broadway Gondolier," with Dick Powell, Joan Blondell, Louise Fazenda, Adolphe Menjou and Bob Murphy.

Tied for Fourth.

Two releases tied for fourth place—"Accent on Youth," with Sylvia Sidney and Herbert Marshall, and "Alice Adams," starring Katharine Hepburn, with Fred MacMurray and Fred Stone. Fifth place in the rankings went to "The Irish in Us," with Jimmy Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Frank McHugh and Olivia de Havilland.

My quarrel with these incontestable box-office ratings is that they place Katharine Hepburn in "Alice Adams" as far down the list as fourth and put her in a deadlock with "Accent on Youth," at that.

It just goes to show what a figurative black eye, such as "Break of Hearts," will do for a star, even when she belongs in the first flight.

In yesterday's review of the new bill at the Belasco, something was said about the number of world figures crowded into the short subject, "Filming the Great," a new release in the "Adventures of a Newsreel Cameraman" series.

Included among them are King George of England, the Prince of Wales, Mahatma Gandhi, King Carol and Prince Michael of Rumania, King Prajhadipok of Siam, Alfonso of Spain, the late King Albert and Prince Leopold of Belgium, former President Doumergue of France, Haile Selassie, King Fuad of Egypt, Aga Khan, King Hagen of Denmark, Queen Wilhelmina of The Netherlands, King Gustav of Sweden, playing tennis on the Riviera at the age of 70 and really playing; Hirohito of Japan, Hitler, Goebbels, Goering, Von Hindenburg, the former Kaiser Wilhelm, the former Crown Prince of Germany, Mussolini, King Victor Emmanuel of Italy, President Roosevelt and no doubt several others I do not at the moment recall.

But that will give you a rough idea.

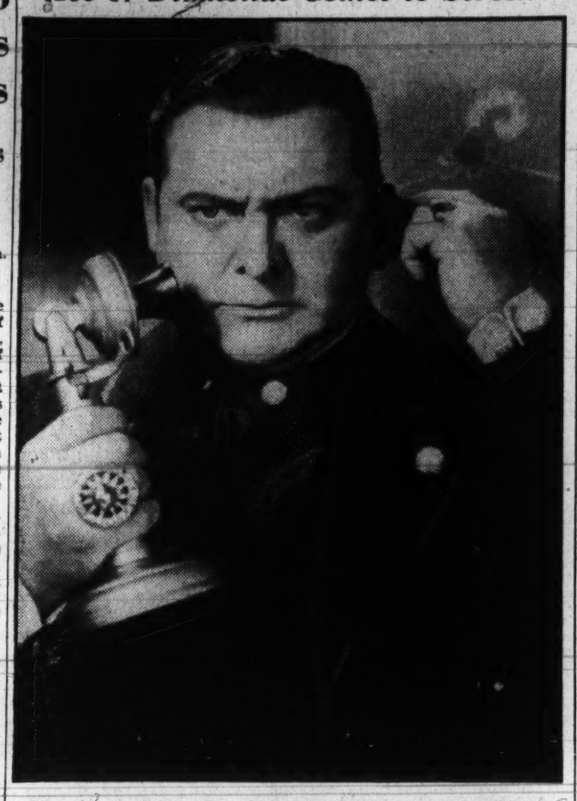
In such circumstances, "a word to the wife is suspicious," is what I always say!

Ace of Diamonds Comes to Screen!



After five weeks of "Top Hat," RKO-Keith's steps out tomorrow with another screen feature of the first rank in "Diamond Jim," a film based on "the life and times of James Buchanan Brady," Broadway's most celebrated playboy at the turn of the century. Edward Arnold, former member of the National Theater Players, is cast in the title role and does an uncommonly fine job in his revivification of one of the most famous figures of his day in American railroading and New York's gayest night spots. Many important personalities of the past are introduced as pivotal characters in this drama of a spectacular career.

Walton Presses Election Contest

Mandamus Is Sought Over Naming of oleman.

By the Associated Press.

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 1.—Counsel for H. H. Walton, of Louisa, have notified Judge Edwin P. Cox, of Chesterfield, that they will ask the State Supreme Court on October 11 for a mandamus directing Judge Gox to hear on its merits Walton's contest of the nomination of S. Bernard Coleman to the State Senate.

Judge Cox recently ruled that he did not have jurisdiction in the matter, holding that the Virginia General Assembly had failed to set up the legal machinery necessary to conduct a contest of a nomination in a State primary.

Coleman was victorious in the August primary by 14 votes. Charges of illegal practices including the use of money and whisky were brought in the action by Walton in protesting the nomination.

Winchester police have been instructed by Mayor C. R. Anderson to enforce all the provisions of the traffic code. As a result there has been a large increase in the number of summons issued for traffic violations.

War Market Whirls Wheat Up Four Cents

December and May Both Cross Dollar Line; Other Grains Rise.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 1.—A war market developed in wheat today, and prices shot upward almost 4 cents a bushel. Aggressive general speculative buying of wheat was witnessed, the main incentive coming from reports current that in various quarters war was expected within a week. Evidence of broadening of domestic demand for flour acted as an additional stimulus to jumps in wheat value.

Wheat closed buoyant at around the day's tiptop figures, 2⅜@3⅝ higher than yesterday's finish; December, 1.02¾@1.02⅞. Corn, 1@1½ up; December, 58⅞@59. Oats, ⅛@½ advance, and provisions, 17 to 25 off.

Right at the outset wheat prices showed a pronounced upward trend and bounded above $1.00 a bushel, both for December and May delivery here. Strained political conditions in Europe, together with alarm over drought in Argentina, were mainly responsible. It was not, however, until near the end of the day's dealings that buying fervor was aroused in earnest by specific talk of likelihood of war within a week.

Soaring of wheat quotations here as the day drew to an end was in the face of moderate setbacks in prices at Buenos Aires, where yesterday the market shot suddenly skyward more than 4 cents. Contributing to strength of the Chicago market were steep premiums offered for wheat available to be delivered at once. Rye, corn and oats reflected the strength of the wheat market.

New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—The revival of demand which started in 1933, says Dun & Bradstreet, now has gathered sufficient strength to put the jewelry trade definitely in a new period of recovery. This year gives promise of being the best in volume and profits since 1930, according to the survey.

North Carolina Tobacco Sales Heavy and High

Winston-Salem Sets New Record With Turnover of 2,000,000 Lbs.

By the Associated Press.

Winston-Salem, N. C., Oct. 1.—Heavy sales marked the opening of the Old Belt tobacco markets in North Carolina today. Prices for early sales averaged approximately $21 a hundred. The "break" here was nearly 2,000,000 pounds, a record for opening day. Warehousemen expected more than 1,250,000 pounds to be sold, compared with sales of 750,000 pounds on opening day last year. The first rows sold brought $22 a hundredweight average.

Blocked sales were in prospect at Mount Airy, with around 500,000 pounds on the floors. Early sales there brought an average of better than $20 a hundred. Bidding was strong on the better grades. Reidsville's break was heavy. The first 100,000 pounds sold there brought an average of $21 a hundred.

Better price trends were reported from markets in other belts. Official figures for the Henderson market's sales yesterday disclosed the average was $21.65 a hundred, highest of the season. Sales were 564,768. At Kingston the average was estimated to be $3 a hundred higher than last week.

Real Estate Bonds Up 26.2% in Year

New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—Real estate bond prices advanced 26.2 per cent since the first of the year, according to statistics on 200 representative Eastern properties compiled at the end of the third quarter by Amott, Baker & Co.

Of the cities represented in the averages, Pittsburgh showed the largest improvement with a gain of 72.6 per cent. Buffalo was second with 33.1 per cent.

Railroad Pays $700,000 Due On Obligations

New Haven Faces About $5,000,000 Payments on November 1.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 1.—Nearly $700,000 in interest on securities of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Co. was paid today by bankers.

J. P. Morgan & Co., paying agents, disbursed about $500,000 of the amount on the road's 15-year secured gold debenture 6s, due April 1, 1940, of which $16,568,600 were outstanding on December 31, 1934.

The Second National Bank of New Haven paid coupons due on $1,340,000 outstanding of a subsidiary, Consolidated Railway Co., nonconvertible debenture 4s, due April 1, 1955, and on $9,997,900 outstanding in the carrier's nonconvertible debenture 3½s, due April 1, 1954.

The New Haven also has about $5,000,000 in payments to make November 1 to security holders and in taxes, and substantial sums are due January 1.

During the first hour of trading on the New York stock and bond markets the bonds were unchanged, to $1 to $1.50 per $100-bond higher and stocks were up from 50 cents to nearly $1. All classes of the road's securities declined sharply yesterday when reports were circulated in the financial community that some doubt existed in certain quarters over the ability to meet the payments today.

The railroad made no comment on the reports nor the decline in its securities, having announced earlier in the month that the payments would be made.

Italian Industry At Output Peak

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Oct. 1.—Industrial Italy reached a production peak during the first half of 1935, 2 per cent higher than the 1928 boom levels and 35 per cent higher than the low of 1932, according to production index figures compiled by the ministry of corporations and made public today through the office of the Commercial Attache to the Italian Embassy here.

The index is based on figures from the five major industrial groups—textiles, metallurgy and engineering, paper mills, building trades and power, heat and light. It shows that the industrial production dip in Italy began in 1930, reached its low of 67.72 per cent in 1932 and showed a 17 per cent jump this year over last.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Flurry of Selling in the Rails Upsets Previously Steady Market; United Fruit Shares Drop 7 Points

By Frank MacMillen,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Oct. 1.—A last-minute flurry of selling in the rails brought liquidation into the other groups in the stock market today and the list finished with net losses of fractions to a point or more.

Up to just before the close, the general market had made headway uphill for fair gains under the leadership of the motors and specialties, some of which bumped through to new highs for the year.

Brokers said the sell-off in the rails was the result of somewhat discouraged feeling about the outlook for this section.

The ever-present spectacle of various roads failing by a wide margin to earn fixed charges was emphasized, observers said, by further Wall Street reflection over the financial problems confronting the New Haven, in spite of the steadiness of the road's shares today as October 1 interest obligations were met. The shares had broken sharply the previous session.

Financial circles say that even though the New Haven has successfully hurdled its October 1 interest payments, additional obligations lie ahead which are typical of those to be met by other roads.

While the rails suffered the sharpest setback, the industrials and utilities had smaller losses, the latter sustaining the least.

Measured by the Associated Press average of 60 stocks, the market was down 0.6 of a point to 48.8. Transactions totaled 1,420,310 shares compared with 1,258,630 on Monday.

Following the sharp break yesterday, New Haven common was unchanged at 5, while the preferred was off ⅞ at 9⅛. New York Central, another road with financial problems ahead, was down 1¼ at 23. Santa Fe declined 2½ to 46¼ on a lower loadings report. Union Pacific backed down 1⅝ to 98¼.

Shares of the automobile companies were in demand as the new models moved nearer shop windows. General Motors ran up to a new high at 47⅜ but closed off ½ at 46¼ under late profit-taking. Auburn likewise moved to a new top and closed with a net gain of 1⅛ at 38⅛.

Specialties which also ran in the new high group included Coca-Cola, which finished up 2½ at 247½. Buying was attributed to the recent four-for-one stock split. Others at peaks for the year during the day were Bullard, Glidden, Libbey-Owens Glass and Electric Auto-Lite, the latter on reports of virtual capacity operations.

A collapse of 7 points in United Fruit was recovered in part by the close of trading when the stock showed a net loss of 5¼ at 62¼. Liquidation of the stock occurred on reports that the company's banana trees had been damaged by the recent hurricane. Recovery in the stock was attributed by brokers to the official statement that the destruction reports had been exaggerated and that higher prices for the fruit would tend to offset the loss.

Fairless Sees Rosy Outlook In Steel Trade

Best Prospects in Four Years, Says New Carnegie Head.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 1.—Benjamin F. Fairless took over the presidency today of the newly formed $450,000,000 Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation and voiced the opinion that the steel industry "has better times ahead."

"There is more reason to be enthusiastic for its future today than at any time in the past four years," he said in an interview. Steel's future, he added, assures that more mills will be built.

The 45-year-old rosy-cheeked executive, who left the executive vice presidency of Republic Steel Corporation to head the new corporation, added:

"For the time being there's nothing definite along the line of additional new mills but it's obvious that other installations will follow in the Pittsburgh district. Most of our money will be spent on flat roll products such as strip, sheets and plates."

Fairless said that a big change already was upon the industry. He explained new methods were being developed of making old products, and predicted development of new products, the most important of which is the use of steel in house construction.

"I am not ready to say the house of tomorrow will be built all of steel," he said, "but it will be a gradual development of steel in house construction. More and more steel will be used in the fabrication of dwellings.

"But I most assuredly think that the railroads will continue to be one of the biggest users of our product."

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London—Trading was inactive on the stock exchange yesterday pending fresh political moves. Oil shares firmed on Trinidad leaseholds' dividend increase, while rubber issues remained steady. Other stocks were neglected. The market closed easy.

Paris—Prices recovered on the bourse as hopes in the government's efforts to revive trade outbalanced anxiety over the international tension. Buyers, although cautious, absorbed what few offerings persisted, and rentes, bank stocks, industrials and international issues regained part of their recent losses. The closing tone was firm.

Berlin—Weakness continued on the bourse, although bonds were dull but steadier. The closing tone was easier.

D. B. Slattery New President Of Advertisers

Former Washington Man Elected by Life Insurance Unit.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Swampscott, Mass., Oct. 1.—To the the advertising programs of the life insurance companies belongs a substantial part of the credit for the general public confidence in the value and security of life insurance, in the opinion of D. Bobb Slattery, former Washingtonian and assistant to the agency vice president of the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co., who was today elected president of the Life Advertisers Association at the association's annual convention.

Mr. Slattery succeeds Stephen A. Swisher, of the Equitable, of Iowa, who will remain on the executive committee of the association. Other officers elected were: Charles C. Fleming, Life Insurance Company of Virginia (Richmond), vice president; Troy N. Rodlum, Acacia Mutual of Washington, D. C. secretary; and Richard N. Budlong, Northwestern National of Minneapolis, treasurer. Executive committeemen elected were: Cyrus T. Stevens, Phoenix Mutual of Hartford; C. I. D. Moore, Pacific Mutual of Los Angeles; John H. McCarroll, Bankers Life of Des Moines; Karl Ljung, jr., Jefferson Standard of Greensboro; E. Morton, North American Life of Toronto, and Douglas J. Murphy, General American Life Insurance Co., St. Louis, Mo.

D. Bobb Slattery.

"It is a mistake to say facts speak for themselves," Mr. Slattery declared in reference to life insurance advertising. "Facts speak only as they are made known and readily understandable. The record of life insurance during the depression years has provided convincing proof of the security it offers, but the influence of this record would have been far less if the facts had remained buried in a mass of statistics. It is the advertising of the life insurance companies that has made the record known in terms of human and individual welfare and security."

Mr. Slattery was born and grew up in Washington. He attended Eastern High School, was graduated from Emerson Institute and continued his studies at night at the Washington College of Accountancy. He steps up to the presidency of the Life Advertisers Association from the vice presidency, to which office he was elected in 1934.

In 1924 he entered the employ of the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co. as a traveling auditor. In 1928 he was made manager of the then newly organized direct mail advertising department, and assisted in other sales promotion work. He was appointed to his present position with the company a little more than a year ago.

Utility Charges Suit Is Brought In Bad Faith

Hopson Accused of "Milking" Company a Million a Year.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 1.—After counsel for the officers and directors of the Associated Gas and Electric Co. questioned the good faith of a stockholders' suit, Supreme Court Justice William T. Collins today reserved decision on a motion to examine before trial Howard C. Hopson, controlling stockholder and former vice president of the company.

Hopson was a will-o'-the-wisp witness before the congressional committee which recently investigated public utilities.

Henry I. Gilbert, suing for himself and other stockholders, wanted to examine, in addition to Hopson, John I. Mange, president of the company, and former State Senator Warren T. Thayer whom he charges received $21,600 "either as a bribe or in exchange for his influence as vice president of the Chasm Power Co."

The suit alleges that the payment was made in a move to induce Chasm Power stockholders to sell their holdings to Associated Gas and Electric, and sets forth that the money should be repaid to Associated Gas.

Of the suit, Defense Attorney Sam I. Cohen said, "We believe the whole matter was conceived in bad faith."

The suit asks an accounting and restoration to the company of losses to stockholders through alleged mismanagement, and charges further that Hopson, during the depression, "milked" the company of $1,000,000 a year.

'First Lady' of Philippines Works Quietly for Educational and Social Advance of Islands

This Solution Gives Flowers Prolonged Life

Fragrance of Cut Plants Also Increased by New Product.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

BACK in grandmother's day the scrupulous housewife always put a bit of charcoal in the bottom of a vase "to keep the water fresh." But in this modern era the charcoal ruse stands side by side with the horseless carriage and hoop-skirt. We proudly turn to our bottle of "cut-flower - control" with the assurance that one drop does more than ten lumps of charcoal. Not only will it keep the water fresh, but it makes the posies last longer, accents their fragrance and prevents slime and sediment from accumulating in the vase.

About 11,000 laboratory tests were necessary to perfect this little miracle worker with the tongue-twisting name. The research work took three years. But the day of success dawned, and "control" is here to lighten the burden of housewives and enhance the joy of flower lovers.

By way of explanation the manufacturers of "control" say, "We have accomplished the rare phenomenon of chemically combining an absorbefacient solution, an astringent quality (styptically speaking) and a controlled catalptic reaction!" Ahem.

Anyway, if you wish to see what "Control" can do just try this experiment: Take any two vases of equal size and fill them with fresh water within one inch of the top. Now add the solution of "cut-flower-control" at the rate of five drops a pint, and place a dozen or more cut flowers or greens into the vase.

Place the two vases in the same room where they are subject to the same heat, and watch the interesting results. Keep the vases filled by adding fresh water daily—no more drops, however. In the treated vase you'll see that the flowers last long after the others have wilted and faded. You may note, too, that the water retains its original freshness.

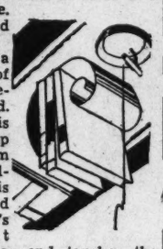
Handy Kit for Travelers.

YOU'LL FIND everything but the kitchen stove in the handy kit put out by a well-known cosmetic house. The "kit" is really a fabric bag, rubber lined. Inside there are soap, wash rag, eye lotion, skin freshener, cleansing cream, powder, fingernail brush, toothbrush and even tooth paste. But wait, something else besides. A neat little package of cleansing tissues. Isn't this ideal for the traveler? Think what a boon to pack and have so many essentials in a single package! The kits come in dark blue, with a rose rubber lining.

Scroll Book Ends.

IF you think there's no news in book ends you'll change your mind after a look at those in a downtown store. They're called book scrolls.



One end is a hard block of wood, attractively lacquered. Attached to this is a flexible strip of chromium plated over solid brass. This strip is twisted like a snail's shell, so that where the loose end touches the wooden block you may slip in a book, or half a dozen. The pressure of the chromium "scroll" keeps the books in place in a practical—and attractive—manner.

Incidentally, these scroll book ends were manufactured by a company founded by Paul Revere, in 1801.

Flower Clips.

A DAINTY and delightful way of adding a floral touch to your dress is furnished by the flower clips featured in a downtown store. These are small bunches of flowers fastened to a clip. And they stay on. No losing them in the hurry and scurry! They range in price from 39 to 50 cents.

Glamour Lost by Emancipated Spanish Women

By Dudley Harmon.

THE EYE-ROLLING, hip-tossing Spanish lady of opera and story-book fame, the dazzling senorita with a rose between her teeth and a seductive gleam in her eye, is gradually going the way of the old-time Spanish grandee who wore velvet knee breeches and hatched political plots between sonnets to his lady's rosy lips.

In her place is appearing a lithe, athletic young woman who plays golf and tennis, wears shorts, studies at the university, and takes part in revolutions.

So says Miss Irene A. Wright, research expert for the Library of Congress in Spain, and a resident of Seville for 21 years. On a recent trip to this country, Miss Wright stopped at the Dodge Hotel during her brief stay in Washington.

Emancipation Achieved.

"In Spain, where revolutions are the order of the day," Miss Wright said, "and cabinets rise and fall in breath-taking succession, the biggest revolution of all has been the emancipation of women in recent years. As everyone knows, heretofore the women of Spain have always led an extremely sheltered life. Young girls were not allowed to go out with men unchaperoned, and even after marriage they were accorded very little liberty by their husbands.

"In spite of the fact that Spanish women in times past have been largely sequestered from the world, they have nevertheless exerted a profound intellectual and cultural influence upon the men. Although they enjoyed few liberties, they had plenty of time to cultivate their minds, and their opinions always had great weight with men.

"But in recent years, they have become less subtle in the manner in which they exert this influence. Now, owing to American manners and the trend toward greater freedom for women everywhere, they find themselves competing on an equal footing with men. To an ever-increasing extent, they are engaging in activities outside the home. Studies, jobs and political activities are absorbing more and more of their time.

Interested in Politics.

"Spanish women are even more interested in politics than the American members of their sex. In recent years, a large group of conservative Catholic women has banded together to combat the revolutionary, communistic movements which have been gaining rapid headway in Spain.

"When Spain first founded its universities, some absent-minded official forgot to put in a clause prohibiting women from attending. So they have always been allowed the privilege of higher education, although not until recently have they taken much advantage of it. But now a fresh crop of feminine doctors of law and philosophy arises every year in Spain."

Miss Wright, who is an authority on all kinds of obscure quirks in Spanish history, is the author of several books and treatises on the subject. In a short time she will return to Spain to resume her research and study at close range the amazing transformation of the Spanish senorita.

Canned Pears, Cherries Make A Fine Dessert

Sparkling Fruit Compote Is Suggested in Today's Dinner Menu.

By Dorothea Duncan.

FRUIT can add charm to any meal. We serve it the first thing in the morning to put an edge on our appetites for the breakfast that is to follow. We serve it for luncheon and again for dinner. It is one food of which persons never tire for it always adds a freshness to the menu.

Tart fruits are favored for breakfast or first courses because they stimulate the appetite. Sweetened fruits find their place at dessert time because they satisfy that craving for something sweet and light after a heavy meal.

Canned fruits can be particularly attractive at dessert time if they are served in a delightful combination and treated with some originality. Today's dinner menu suggests a sparkling fruit compote. Orange rind and port wine have been introduced here to enhance the flavor of matched pear halves and Royal Anne cherries. Prepare the compote by the following recipe.

Sparkling Fruits.

1 No. 2½ Bartlett pears
1 No. 2 can Royal Anne cherries.
Water.
1 cup sugar.
1 cup port wine
Rind one half orange, cut in thin strips

Dilute the sirup from the drained fruits to make four cups liquid. Add sugar and boil ten minutes. Add wine and orange rind being careful to use just the orange part. Place the pear halves and cherries in this sirup. Heat. Serve either hot or well chilled. This will serve eight.

The following menus show how fruit may be used in various ways:

Mrs. Quezon Is Artist, Linguist and Musician

MME. DE QUEZON.

She Prefers to Remain in Background, Declaring Aggressive Leadership Creates Petty Jealousies That Retard Success.

Miss Drennen, author of the following article, is a newspaper woman and playwright now living in Washington. Recently while working in Hollywood she met through friends Mme. de Quezon, who was then in Los Angeles.

By Marguerite Drennen.

WITH THE ELECTION of Manuel de Quezon to the presidency of the Commonwealth Government of the Philippine Islands, an unassuming little woman who for 20 years has inconspicuously guided her countrywomen to educational and social betterment, becomes in name what she has long been in effect—the islands' "First Lady." Known to the insular peoples as Mme. de Quezon, she likes to be called simply—Mrs. Quezon, pronounced Kay-son.

In the Philippine Islands, "ladies" do not seek for fame, but so universal is the admiration of her countrywomen for Aurora de Quezon that fame has come to rest upon her like a gift bestowed. In her very name, Aurora, Filipinos find the symbol of their "dawn."

To have a personal interview with Mrs. Quezon is to come face to face with intelligence, womanliness, tact, charm. It is to understand how, in the role of gracious hostess at an afternoon "merienda," she has been able to maneuver deftly the conversation toward such subjects as suffrage, Red Cross, National Federation of Women's Clubs, health and welfare movements or better homes and schools, subtly impressing the benefits of organization. By the time the hot chocolate, biscuits and sweets have been consumed, enthusiasm is sure to be riding high. Later, when others have formed the club, she lends every aid as one of its active members.

"It is better that they should see the good and want it for themselves," she explained. "So often aggressive leadership creates petty jealousies and misunderstandings that only retard success." This ability to lead, yet to keep in the background, accounts for her great popularity among all political factions.

Mrs. Quezon charmingly admits she is the wife of a great national leader and the mother of three interesting children, but in point of her own fine accomplishments as leader, artist, linguist, musician, maker of exquisite needlework and literary student, she has only a word and a smile to offer.

She is confident of the Island's future. Step by step, she has counted the advance. She has seen the boggy shore at Manila converted into famous Pier 7, the second most modern and beautiful dock in the world. She has watched the reeking moats of old Fort Santiago grow into a tourist mecca, where golf balls are fired by the friendly invader and silent gun-turrets play "natural hazards." Today, Filipino babies that were once pitifully undernourished, thrive on substitute milk made from cocoanuts in a land that has never known cows.

Accustomed to the American manner, Mrs. Quezon retains her national distinctiveness and adheres to her native customs, in which she takes definite pride. A wife's place is at her husband's side; his welfare and wishes receive her first consideration. She accompanies the president on his drives, swims and plays golf with him, reads the papers and magazines to him as he rests; remains his faithful companion except when his hours are taken up with official business. She never leaves home for a visit without taking her children. She personally manages her house, plans her menus, sees that the servants are provided with just the right amount of money to make the required market purchases. "It is not considered suitable for a 'lady' to do actual housework, but she may not be excused from personal supervision."

Mrs. Quezon married at an early age. Filipinos usually marry at 15. The butterfly type does not exist, nor the sometimes-to-be-envied bachelor girl. Divorce, like hats, has never been introduced on the islands.

Social gatherings are in the form of dinners, dances and afternoon teas—only recently have bridge parties and bobbed hair appeared. Conversation is first concerned with family and friends when it invariably turns to politics. Although the franchise of women was revoked, due to the failure to get a 300,000 quota, the 200,000 ballots that were dropped proves that interest in the voting is rapidly growing.

Mrs. Quezon maintains her own private library, a unit distinct from the fine library collected by her husband. "See," she indicated, taking a volume down from the shelves, "I've designed a bookplate. Whenever my children shall open one of carefully selected and highly treasured volumes their eyes will rest for a moment on the message I have placed here as a constant reminder to them to grow in the love of God, family, country and in knowledge. Civilization can come to remote islands only by means of books."

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

ALONG ABOUT this time of the year we have just so much refurbishing to get out of our system. Even if the house doesn't really need a lot done to it . . . even if we don't have anything much to spend. When that's the case, the best thing to do is to move the furniture around and make some fresh cushions . . . maybe add a pair of new lamps and a bright vase.

• • • •

C V. writes: I would appreciate some ideas on how I can make a few changes in my living room. I can't buy much new except perhaps a few accents, but we all feel tired of the present effect. The walls are cream, the rug rust and the furniture in greens, blues, golds. We don't have any fireplace and so the room never seems to center anywhere . . . could you suggest some way to arrange it so that it has a focal point? And what accessories would you get?

• • • •

Answer: Use bookshelves or a wide window as a focal point and center your furniture there . . . with the sofa at right angles to the wall if that is graceful in your particular room. Then add a low coffee table with a tea or coffee set of copper and a big copper pitcher for flowers. New lamps with copper bases would be attractive and pottery in blues. A new slip cover or two in a flowered material might brighten things up a lot, too.

Acne Is Blamed For Blemishes In Most Cases

Victims of Skin Disease Are Warned to Avoid a Rich Diet.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

THE skin disease known as acne vulgaris is probably the most common cause of facial blemishes, and scars that often follow the infection are deep-seated and unsightly.

As a rule the eruptions appear between the ages of 12 and 30, and the condition is usually worse during the period of sexual development, when the glandular system of the body bursts into great activity. The sebaceous glands of the skin (oil glands) become excessively active and their secretions frequently become thick and cheesy, blocking the openings of the ducts and preventing free drainage. The outside of the plug may become dry or discolored from dirt, thus forming a blackhead or comedo. The clogged channels have a tendency to increase in size, resulting in the destruction of skin tissue. This accounts for the appearance of "enlarged pores."

The condition is easily understood if one will but consider what is happening at the time. The sebaceous glands that lie clustered in various areas of the skin, particularly the face during adolescence, secrete great quantities of an oily material called sebum. It is just as though the individual were perspiring—not water, but an oily substance. If these glands are overactive bacteria gain entrance to their outlets from soiled fingers, street dust, soiled powder puffs or non-sterile face lotions. Inflammation and pustules result.

Manifestations Local.

As a rule, the manifestations of acne are local, but the disease may be aggravated by digestive disturbances, constipation, and particularly by the excessive use of starches and sugars. Parents frequently fail to realize the importance of the condition and the necessity for treatment promptly upon the appearance of the first few pustules. Many an individual is marred for life because of neglect.

The first principle in treatment is good hygiene. This means daily baths, proper food, plenty of rest, prevention of constipation and attention to the local inflammation. Under aseptic precautions postules and abscesses should be carefully opened and drained.

Both X-ray and ultraviolet have been recommended, but there is no unanimity of opinion as to their value, although some authorities employ the former as a routine measure. If used, the dosage must be very small, approximately one-quarter of a skin unit, unfiltered, once a week. Ordinarily 10 or 12 treatments are required. A recent report notes that, following one course of X-ray treatments of 141 patients, 88 were completely relieved and 43 improved, but relapses occurred in 28. The cold quartz lamp is recommended by some specialists in preference to any other form of therapy. Vaccines which at one time were highly regarded are now considered to be of minor importance.

Simple Treatment Hints.

Here are some simple treatment hints. If the secretion from the sebaceous glands is observed to be excessive (a marked oiliness of the face and the appearance of pimples or blackheads) the skin must be washed several times daily with soap and hot water. Do not use a washcloth. By means of an instrument known as a comedo extractor all pimples or blackheads that are superficial can be removed. This process is again followed by thorough cleansing with soap and water. Steaming the face with hot towels is of value. Cold cream should not be employed, even though it is sterile. It will plug up the mouths of the ducts and stop the normal outflow of their secretions.

Sulphur in some form taken by mouth often has an excellent effect. The diet should not be rich, and sugar (candy), nuts and fatty foods must be restricted or avoided altogether.

Florida Feminist Victory Put Over by One Woman

Mrs. West, Recent D. C. Victor, Backed Political Equality Act.

MRS. HELEN HUNT WEST is largely responsible for a bill giving Florida women representation on committees of political parties.

THREE weeks ago women of Florida acquired equal representation with men on the executive committees of political parties through an act of the Legislature. The most revolutionary act in Florida politics since the passage of the suffrage amendment, it makes Florida the first Southern State to enact legislation of this type, and places 1,400 women in positions in the councils of the Democratic Party hitherto occupied solely by men.

The driving force behind this bill was Mrs. Helen Hunt West, slim Florida newspaperwoman recently in Washington with her husband for a visit. In fact, Mrs. West conducted the whole campaign almost single handed, for it was largely by her individual efforts, rather than through an organized drive with speeches, banners and parades, that the bill was put through.

Since Mrs. West is legislative reporter for one of Florida's leading newspapers, she has valuable contacts among lawmakers in that State. These enabled her to influence State senators and representatives by means of personal conversations.

Not only is Florida the first of the Southern States to adopt such legislation, but it is one of less than ten throughout the country to enact a similar law. When Mrs. West began her drive she was told that it was an impossible feat, but several months of persevering work, and 60 days passed in the legislative chamber while the bill was under consideration, made Mrs. West's plan a reality.

Mrs. West believes that women at heart are vitally interested in politics, and that they could play an important part in this field once existing prejudices against their sex were removed.

"The tremendous response of women to the passage of my bill," she said, "has in itself convinced me that they are merely waiting for an opportunity to do something really important in politics. The Florida Federation of Women's Clubs has asked me to speak to them about the act, as has the Association of Business and Professional Women's Clubs. I have already addressed the Women's Democratic Club of Georgia on this subject.

"It seems unfair," Mrs. West continued, "that women are barred by prejudice from occupying positions in party councils, as they are in many States, when one considers that in some places, as in Indiana, they are responsible for more than 50 per cent of the votes cast. But now for every man in Florida who occupies a position on the executive committee of a political party, there is a woman representative, from the State committee down to the smallest unit of county groups."

Young Mother Urged to Make Caution a Habit

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

The young mother tending her first child is apt to count too little on "the first time." In the daily ritual of caring for her baby she often forgets that the child is constantly growing and developing, and that she must be ever on guard for the unexpected.

For some time she can safely lay it on the bed, knowing that it can not move about enough to fall off. Then one day, when her back is turned, she hears a thump and there lies the baby on the floor. Or she leaves the safety pins within reach, counting on the child's indifference to his surroundings today as yesterday and the day before, only to find that he has suddenly become interested in the shiny subjects and is preparing to swallow one.

There is always a first time, and it is sometimes the last as well. Nine times out of 10, the fall will not hurt the child, or he will not succeed in swallowing the pin, or the powder box which he is waving over his head will not pour the powder into his lungs.

Three-State Church Body Opens Parley

136th Annual Meeting of United Brethren on at Elkton.

Session Hears Plea for Sanctified Laity by Bishop Batdorf.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Oct. 1.—Bishop George D. Batdorf, of Harrisburg, Pa., opened the 136th annual session of the Virginia United Brethren Confernece at Elkton today with a plea for a sanctified laity to help ministers carry out the work and aims of the church.

He disparaged that form of sanctification whose expression, he said, consists chiefly in an "ecstatic emotional spree." The speaker set forth the form which "calls forth a Godly walk before a callous and sin-steeped world." Bishop Batdorf warned pastors against selecting church officers "merely because the men are bankers and presidents of large corporations."

Dr. U. P. Hovermale, Martinsburg, W. Va., was re-elected conference superintendent for the sixth time. He reported that the Virginia conference for the first time in its history subscribed its budget 100 per cent. Last year the Virginia conference led the denomination with a record of 91 per cent.

Dr. Hovermale reported also a 1 per cent increase in membership. The conference has a membership of 19,000 in the Shenandoah Valley area of Virginia, six counties in West Virginia and two counties in Maryland. There are 144 churches with 43 pastors.

More than 500 persons attended the opening sessions which were devoted to the annual Communion and memorial services, the reports of committees and the educational program. Presidents of the three institutions supported by the conference—Wade Miller, Shenandoah College, Dayton, Va.; Dr. C. A. Lynch, Lebanon Valley College, Annville, Pa., and Dr. A. T. Howard, Bonebrake Seminary, Dayton, Ohio—reported on the church's educational program and on the welfare of their institutions.

The conference will end Thursday night. The sesisons are being held at Elkton for the first time, celebrating the completion of new St. Pauls Church, of which the Rev. W. H. Smith, formerly of Keyser, W. Va., is pastor.

Road Improvement Sought by County

Anne Arundel Would Divert Defense Road Traffic.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 1.—The Anne Arundel County commissioners today passed a resolution requesting the State roads commission to improve the Davidsonville road connecting Washington with Annapolis to help divert traffic from Defense highway.

With the exception of Thomas J. Cullimore, board president, the remaining six commissioners approved the resolution which asks that the Davidsonville route, which was recently connected with Annapolis by completion of a five-mile gravel section, be widened and improved.

The commissioners pointed out that if the route, which runs from Central avenue, Washington, through Seat Pleasant, Hall Station and Davidsonville to Annapolis, is improved, Washington traffic going to South, Rhode and West River shores would be sufficiently cared for. Six miles south of Annapolis the new route connects with the Annapolis-Solomons Island road.

The board also made application to the Federal Government for funds to construct a farm-to-market road from Solomons Island around Annapolis to Bay Ridge to withdraw traffic from Annapolis.

School Chiefs Close Richmond Conference

Richmond, Va., Oct. 1 (AP).—School superintendents from more than 100 Virginia cities and counties closed their annual two-day conference here today with an address by Eliot V. Graves, who urged a State-wide program of safety education and accident prevention drills in the public schools.

School financing, a vital subject to the school heads who were facing the problems of preparing budgets calling for approximately the same expenditures as last year despite increased operating costs, was discussed by Sidney B. Hall, superintendent of public instruction.

Virginia Sees $22 Tobacco; Sales Begin

Koiner Say Year's Crop Is Best He Has Seen in Old Dominion.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 1.—A price average of from $20 to $22 per hundred pounds of tobacco was indicated this morning as auctioneers began moving through crowded warehouses in the Virginia old belt markets.

More than 1,000,000 pounds blocked the Danville market on the opening day of the season, and half that amount was ready for sale at South Boston.

Growers at South Boston believed they had a good cigarette tobacco that would attract favorable bids.

Petersburg's warehouses estimated that approximately 75,000 pounds were under cover there last night and predicted nearly 200,000 pounds would be offered as an opening break. The grade, buyers there and elsewhere admitted, is better than that recently appearing in the Carolina eastern belts.

Three warehouses at Clarksville this morning began operations at the opening of the Bright Market, with buyers from all large companies on hand.

George W. Koiner, State commissioner of agriculture, said at Richmand that the Virginia crop was "the best I have ever seen."

J. H. Meek, market director for the State Agricultural Department, said the U. S. Department of Agriculture would have agents in south Boston and possibly Danville to sample gradings for tabulation of a daily market news report.

Federal Revenues In Virginia Slump

Writs Halting AAA Levy Collections Blamed.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 1.—Federal tax collections in Virginia slumped in September below the aggregate of the corresponding month a year ago because of injunctions halting the collection of AAA processing levies, Internal Revenue Collector N. B. Early's figures showed today.

The shrinkage of processing taxes caused a lower total despite an increase of $500,000 in income tax collections as compared with a year ago.

Income tax payments aggregated $2,498,291 last month as compared with $1,915,038 a year ago. Processing taxes brought only $359,450 last month as against $626,263 in September, 1934. Total taxes were $12,521,366 in September as compared with $12,788,947 in the corresponding month last year.

A.G.&E. Buys Del-Mar-Va Power Firms

Utilities Company Secures Stock After Insull Liquidation.

No Changes in Policy or Management Expected Now.

By the Associated Press.

Salisbury, Md., Oct. 1.—The group of utility companies furnishing electricity, gas and in some instances ice to more than 100 companies on the Del-Mar-Va Peninsula was under new control today but little or no change in management or policy was expected.

This point was made at the general offices of the companies here in explaining that control had been obtained by the Associated Gas & Electric Co. through purchase of the common stock from the Chase National Bank of New York.

The transaction is not to affect the preferred stock, held by hundreds of investors in the territory served, except as it may be influenced by future managerial policies.

Possession of the common stock went to the Chase National Bank with liquidation of the utility organizations headed by Samuel Insull. The bank retains the stock as collateral, strengthened by 50 per cent additional securities of the Associated Gas & Electric.

The main company of the Del-Mar-Va system is the Eastern Shore Public Service Co., a Delaware corporation. Affiliates serving the peninsula and a part of Southern Maryland include the Eastern Shore Public Service Co., of Maryland, the Maryland Light & Power Co., the Consumers Public Service Co., the Delmarva Power Co., and the Eastern Shore Public Service Co., of Virginia.

This system serves approximately 32,000 customers. Its properties in Maryland have a value, as indicated by records of the State Public Service Co., of approximately $5,000,000.

At the same time, the Associated Gas & Electric gained control of this group of companies it also announced it had acquired the Virginia Public Service Co., serving approximately 83,000 customers in Virginia.

Marrying Parson's Assistant Sees Good Field in Elkton

Undecided as to Bidding for Marriage Trade of 'Gretna Green.'

By the Associated Press.

Plainfield, N. J., Oct. 1.—The Rev. C. A. Starkey, who has been acting as "assistant" to Edward Minor, unfrocked "marrying parson" at Elkton, Md., said today he planned to take up permanent residence at the Maryland Gretna Green.

"There is a good field in Elkton," he said. "There is much room for religious work. I think this is because there is an aversion among some ministers there to leaving their homes during the hours the marriage license bureau is open. If I go there, I will take a lease and establish a church."

He said he did not know whether he would bid for any of the marriage trade for which Elkton is noted, and added: "It is my prerogative, of course, as a duly ordained minister to perform marriages if I feel so inclined."

Starkey, who is 62, said he is a priest of the American Catholic Church, which, he said, is a coalition of the Greek, the Armenian and the Polish Catholic churches.

Starkey plans to return to Elkton this week-end. He said he had been there for the past two week-ends "under a temporary arrangement" with Edward Minor, the former clergyman who was unfrocked by the Brantly Baptist Church in Baltimore.

One hundred and fifty union miners from the Galloway and Bear Mountain sections are said to be trying to prevent mines of the Adrian Fuel Co. from reopening on a non-union basis.

Miners there and at other mines in the region walked out Friday over wages.

Relief Money State Burden, Latimer Says

Attacks Coal's Proposal That Cities, Counties Take Over Load.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Oct. 1.—The recent proposal of State Senator J. Alan Coad to return the care of unemployables to the counties and cities of the State was opposed today by Senator James B. Latimer (Republican), Calvert.

"I don't think we ought to put the burden of the unemployables on the counties and Baltimore City suddenly," Senator Latimer said. "The counties could carry it, but Baltimore couldn't. I want to be fair to everybody."

Senator Latimer also said that he favored a continuation of the gross receipts tax to finance the care of unemployables, who will be left to the State after November 1.

"No other tax is as painless as the gross receipts tax," the senator said. "I was surprised at the opposition to it at the last session. But I believe that most people are satisfied with it now."

Coad, who is chairman of the senate finance committee, recently proposed that the receipts tax be allowed to lapse when it expires next spring. Gov. Harry W. Nice has said that he would call a special session to renew the tax or find a new source of funds for care of those who cannot work.

Coad said that his proposal would save the cost of the special session and that counties would be more careful who got relief if they had to pay for all of it themselves.

Fingerprints Taken.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

City and county residents may call at police headquarters in the evening to have their fingerprints taken. These will be forwarded to the Federal Bureau of Investigation for its noncriminal file, Police Capt. Clarence E. Emmert said.

Callan Relieved By Gen. Bowley As Area Chief

Takes Command of Third Corps in Baltimore Without Formality.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Oct. 1.—Command of the Third Corps Area, with headquarters in Baltimore, passed to Maj. Gen. Albert J. Bowley, today as he relieved Maj. Gen. R. E. Callan of the post.

Gen. Bowley took office without formality. He merely issued an order to troops in the area, announcing that he had taken over the command and had appointed Capt. Haydon L. Boatner as his aid de camp.

Gen. Callan was ordered to Baltimore in the spring of this year. He went on leave today and will remain in Baltimore until about November 15, then he will go to Washington to be retired.

Gen. Bowley came here from command of the Fifth Corps Area at Columbus, Ohio. In coming to Baltimore, he returns to the scene of his first Army service. He was graduated from West Point in 1897 and was commissioned in the artillery and ordered to Fort McHenry, in Baltimore harbor.

The area commander was born in California in 1875. He served in the Spanish-American War, the Philippine Insurrection and the World War. For this latter service he was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal, the Legion of Honor and the Croix de Guerre. During the World War he commanded the Seventeenth Field Artillery and the Second Field Artillery Brigade. At the end of the war he was chief of artillery of the Sixth Corps.

Virginia Pair Found Slain By Roadside

Coroner's Jury Renders Verdict of Murder in Wise County.

Neighborhood Resident Surrenders Himself but Is Silent.

By the Associated Press.

Wise, Va., Oct. 1.—The lifeless bodies of Sam McCarty, 35, and his wife, Phursie McCarty, 30, were found lying on the Burchfield road about 10 miles north of here today, and a hastily summoned coroner's jury decided the couple had been murdered.

Clad only in night clothes, the bodies of the man and wife were lying a short distance from their home and about 70 yards apart. Mrs. McCarty had been shot in the breast and her husband in the back of the head.

A gun was found near the woman's body. Luther Taylor, a neighbor of the McCarty's, said that he had loaned it to another resident of this section last night.

Wise County officers said that Russell Hubbard, who lives in the section where the slaying occurred, came to the Wise jail today and surrendered himself, asking that he be locked up. He was otherwise noncommittal.

The McCartys are survived by three small children. Mrs. McCarty was the daughter of Thurston Hubbard, former deputy sheriff of Wise County.

Dryden Orders Survey Of WPA Employables

Baltimore, Oct. 1 (AP).—Francis H. Dryden Maryland works progress administrator, said today he had asked his staff to prepare a table showing how many unemployed could be absorbed by Federal work-relief rolls by the time Federal direct relief is cut off on November 1. The figures will probably be ready by tomorrow, Dryden said.

"They will include an estimate of the employment by all agencies spending work-relief money in the State," he said. "This means that I will have a total of the number of men expected to be working on roads, on various projects sponsored by the Federal Government, on Public Works Administration jobs, and on WPA projects."

47,800 to See World Series Opener Today; Tigers Favorites

Gallico
Visits Locker Room, Joins 'Iffy Club' And Picks Tigers

By Paul Gallico.

DETROIT, Oct. 1.—It is exciting to go into the clubhouse locker rooms the day before the World Series, and just stand around and look and listen. The air you breath is good, close, man's air, a little thick and sweaty, tinged with rubdown and woolen garments and wet towels. The big rooms are full of real men. I never knew of a ball player that was a sissy. They bang and stomp and clatter around and talk strong.

At moments like these, the matriarchy under which we live is far, far away. Females count for nuthin! Even the famous Edna of "How'm I Doin' Edna" was far away in El Dorado, Ark., with the baby, where she belonged. Schoolboy Rowe's pappy was around, but all the mess of females that cluttered up his gay young life last year were happily absent.

Yes, the atmosphere was strictly and gloriously and toughly masculine. The athletes were standing around in their skins, pulling on or drawing off nice, dirty, woolen shirts, tamping their feet into spiked shoes, weighing bats in their hands, chatting with newspapermen, or, if preparing themselves for the practice field, stuffing their cheeks with chewing tobacco until their faces were pouched like squirrels.

It wasn't necessary to listen to what they were saying, because no ball player ever says anything of importance on the eve of a world series, beyond that he is feeling fine, but one can gain satisfaction merely by listening to the gusto with which speech and laughter is pitched.

BASEBALL spikes make a nice masculine sound on a concrete locker room floor, and so do bat heads when dropped. Most of the talk is drawled, because so many of the boys come from the West or the Southwest. All the oaths are mighty and resounding, and none of the players talks without using them freely, interspersing them as innocent and noncounting adjectives until it no longer sounds like swearing.

The oldsters do it from force of habit and the youngsters pick it up to be like the veterans, like kids in the Navy. And the atmosphere is completely refreshing and stimulating. These kid ball players are so grandly and innocently tough. Some of them have baby eyes, and long curling lashes, and so they chaw, cuss and spit.

For no particular reason, I found myself suddenly interested in the locker of Schoolboy Rowe. The Schoolboy has changed a lot—and for the better. A pater familias now, he has more poise and dignity and ease of manner. For one thing, there are no women caterwauling on his trail, and for another he has been through fires and torment of newspaper build-up. He has four pairs of shoes in the mess of lumpy woolen things at the bottom of his locker, and you would be surprised how small his feet are for a big man.

On the top shelf are bundles of old, dusty Sunday papers, his cap, a bottle of liniment, and a shoebox containing treasures—letters, telegrams, visiting cards, lucky pieces, a couple of rabbits' feet, and in a little leather bag, two baseballs. "Ah won a couple of early season games with those two," he explains.

TWO sets of uniforms hang from the hooks, as well as a pair of "no bruise" sliding pads and two woolen undershirts with long sleeves, sweaters, and an amazing number of supporters. Two bats stand up in the corner, Louisville Sluggers with his name burned onto the ends. "Ah don't like 'em," he said. "They're too heavy in the haid."

Mr. Walter Hagen, the golf player, all ruddy in the face and wearing a yellow necktie, was in the Tiger dressing room exchanging the time of the day with the ball players and gripping baseball bats. You remember, don't you, that Mr. Hagen was once a semipro player around Rochester and was slated to go South to Philadelphia for a major league tryout as an outfielder I asked Mr. Hagen what had turned him from baseball to golf, because he was supposed to have been a pretty good ball player.

He grinned innocently and explained: "Why, you see, I went to Chicago and won the Open. I was only 20 and it was a great surprise to me. I wasn't even going to go, but a friend of mine insisted, and paid by expenses. I was sort of unconscious through it all, and just kept knocking the ball up onto the green and into the hole. After I won it I thought I'd better get busy and learn how to play golf, so I qui tbaseball."

Bruins or Tigers, Tigers or Bruins? . . . Those Cubs have the youth and the fire. Warren Brown, the Chicago sports writer, says they completely unconscious and that if they ever find out they won the pennant they will collapse in a heap. But the Tigers have one of the great pitchers in that big Rowe, and the other strings on the pitching fiddle aren't bad, either.

Those Tigers will give you a burst of r uns too, like the old Yankees. Me, I'm going to pick the Detroits this time, in five games. I have to, anyway, because I have joined the "Iffy" Club, an exclusive organization of some 155,000 members, very difficult to get into. You wear a little celluloid button with a funny picture of a Tiger on it, and root for the Messrs. Cochrane, Gehringer, Rowe & Co. That's what I'm doing.

Rowe Faces Warneke in Slab Duel
Fever High, Thousands Jam Detroit; Betting Is Mild So Far.
City Recovers Wounded Pride of '34 Defeat by Cardinals.

By Shirley Povich,
A Staff Correspondent.

DETROIT, Oct. 1.—A city recovered from its wounded pride of last fall when Detroit's fondly-regarded Tigers met in the Cardinals a superior team, plays host again on the morrow to the opening of another World Series.

World Series fever had Detroit firmly in its grip again tonight as the Tigers prepared to carry the American League standard into the battle against the Chicago Cubs, super-sensations of the National League pennant race.

Ticket scalpers were asking—and getting—$100 per pair for choice seats originally priced at $3.30 for a three-game block. Baseball is on every tongue. Incoming railroads, highways and air lanes are disgorging thousands of fans hourly and the lobbies of the larger hotels are almost impenetrable. Bleacher fans have bivouacked for days outside the gates awaiting the 19,000 uncovered seats that go on sale tomorrow morning. A throng of 47,800 will see the first game.

Noticeably Absent.

But the usual pre-game speculation among the series throngs anent the opening-game pitchers is noticeably absent. Manager Mickey Cochrane, of the Tigers, and Manager Charlie Grimm, of the Cubs, for days have been emphatic in their selections. It will be Schoolboy Rowe on the mound for the Tigers against Lon Warneke, of the Cubs, in the inaugural battle.

Cochrane's Tigers regin as the pre-series betting favorites. Despite the story-book finish of the Cubs with their 21-game winning streak that rocketed them into the National League championship, and despite the dismal late-season performance of the Tigers, who lost six of their last seven games, current wagering persists in establishing Detroit as the betting choice.

Here in Detroit tonight, bookmakers are offernig odds of 7 to 10 against the Tigers winning the series. A wager on the Cubs can command only even money, it is the time-honored bookmaker's percentage.

Betting Is Mild.

But betting has been mild. A swerving of sentiment toward the Cubs has been met by the shortening of the odds against both clubs and betting commissioners are awaiting a show of heavy money before final quotations are made.

For tomorrow's opening game they have set up special odds which finds the Tigers the favorites to beat Warneke at a quotation of 10 to 13. The Cubs' chances of beating Rowe are held at a 11 to 10.

If it is to be a pitchers battle tomorrow, and with both Cochrane and Grimm grooming their respective aces, indications point to that eventuality, then come what may it will be a triumph for the Arkansas foothills. For, as 1935 World Series fate has decreed it, the pitching hopes of both the Tigers and the Cubs are gangling Arkansas farm lads maturing in brilliance in the big leagues.

Warneke Wheel-Horse.

Grimm's nomination of Warneke falls becomingly upon the towheaded, tobacco-chewing right-hander who has been a star for the Cubs from the first day he entered the big leagues. He was one of the wheel-horses of the Cubs' pitching staff during that 21-game winning streak and it was Warneke who drove home the telling blow against the Cardinals in the late-season finish by allowing only two hits and winning a 1-0 game from Paul Dean.

He is a vastly modulated young man now, far different from the Warneke who last year, after losing his seventh successive game by a one-run margin, stalked into the clubhouse, kicked over the stove, broke bats, tore hats and shirts to shreds and generally showed his disgust in a fit of temper. Grimm holds no fear for Warneke under World Series fire.

Cochrane, still rueing his failure to start Schoolboy Rowe in the opening game of last year's series against the Cardinals, is brooking no hesitation with his big right-hander this year. Rowe represents the Tigers' natural pitching choice for the inaugural. The team's best pitcher possessed of both the most speed and control, he does, indeed, represent the best that the Tigers have to offer.

1 Up at Turn, Lily Harper Routs Foe
Trounces Mrs. Watson by 4 and 3; Mrs. Clark Wins on 18th.

By the Associated Press.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 1.—Still the tournament sensation, Lily Harper, of Portsmouth, the defending champion, marched safely past her first obstacle in defense of her crown today when she eliminated the stubbornly contesting Mrss Hunter Watson, of Crewe, 4 and 3, in the first round of the women's State golf championship.

Finding more opposition than her supporters had bargaine dfor, Lily was only 1 up after a very creditable outgoing nine, but Mrs. Watson home and the 19-year-old Portsmouth girl closed out the match on the fifteenth green.

It was a great day for champions, with three former titlists moving with Miss Harper into tomorrow's quarter-finals. Mrs. Jean Jones, of Richmond, champion in 1926 and 1929, proved herself still a dangerous adversary when she closed out Mrs. H. N. Allen, the Newport News ace, 4 and 3.

Mrs. Priddy Wins.

Mrs. Clara Priddy, of Richmond, after a nip-and-tuck fight to the turn, applied the pressure coming back to eliminate Mrs. C. B. Walden, also of Richmond, 5 and 3, but another former champion, Mrs. David Clark, of Washington, was carried to the eighteenth green by the surprising Miss Lucy Payne Pinder, of Richmond.

A bit jittery at the start, Miss Pinder lost three holes in a row and although she rallied sensationally, she failed to make the grade and her more experienced rival triumphed, 2 up.

All of the champions looked for comparative easy going in their quarter-final matches, although Miss Harper faces a well-schooled opponent in Mrs. Buford Scott, of Richmond, who moved through her first round match at the expense of Mrs. George Owens, of Petersburg, 2 and 1.

Faces Mrs. Addington.

Mrs. Jones faces Mrs. G. C. Quesenberry, of Charlottesville, conqueror of Mrs. G. S. Hall, of Amelia, 1 up, at the nineteenth green; Mrs. Priddy faces Mrs. W. J. Barton, of Petersburg, and Mrs. Clark opposes Mrs. J. C. Addington, of Norfolk.

Mrs. Barton eliminated Mrs. Neil Wessells, of Roanoke, 3 and 2, in their first-round match, and Mrs. Addington trounced Mrs. J. Nat Whitlow, of Richmond, 5 and 4.

Perhaps the best finish of the day was made by Mrs. Scott, who found herself 2 down after eleven holes, but rallied to eliminate Mrs. Owens at the seventeenth.

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—The big push for World Series tickets at Wrigley Field lasted 3 hours and 55 minutes today.

Promptly at 8 a. m. windows of 20 boothsa were flung open and the mad rush was on. At 11:55, the windows were slammed down. The rush was over and 37,000 box and grandstand tickets had been sold on the cash-and-carry plan—leaving about half of the 20,000 loyal Cub fans, who waited all night in line, with nothing to show for their vigil.

The 17,000 box seats—at $19.80 per strip of three tickets—one for each game in Chicago, were snapped up in the first hour. The $16.50 grandstand strips went as quickly as salesmen could make change. About 13,000 bleacher sets will be placed on sale the day of each game.

The disappointed persons hung around for a few minutes after the end of the supply was announced, apparently hoping that a few tickets had been overlooked. They dispersed good naturedly when 40 police ordered them to move on, with some taking up new stands in front of the bleacher-seat windows.

It was reported that a large number of strips had reached the hands of speculators who were getting 40 each for box seats and 25 apiece for grandstand tickets. One enterprising operator opened shop last night, offering to "buy, sell or exchange" series tickets. He was offered as high as $70 per strip for box-seat reservations.

Diffenbaugh and Bass Reach Tourney Final

By Dave Herman.

GEORGE DIFFENBAUGH, diminutive Indian Spring Country Club professional, had two close shaves yesterday, but in each match he turned on the proverbial golfing heat to enter the finals of the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. championship over his home course.

Diffenbaugh, who won the medal with a brilliant 69, will meet Johnny Bass, 22-year-old Clifton Park professional, over the 36-hole route today. The morning round will start at 10 o'clock, the afternoon at 2 p. m.

Eliminated by the little Indian Spring master were Clyde DePishon, red-thatched Quantico pro, and Aeex Taylor, the Scotsman from Rolling Road. Diffenbaugh defeated DePishon, 2 up, shooting a 68, three under par. In the afternoon he met just as stern opposition from Taylor, and won, 2 up, thanks to a birdie deuce on the seventeenth hole.

Bass Beats Tredar.

Young Bass, who put out Defending Champion Charlie Betschler, of Hillendale, 2 up, Monday, removed Al Treder, of Manor, 2 and 1 in a stirring match.

Treder had a real scrap on his hands in his morning duel with Glenn Spencer, long-driving Maryland Country Club pro, winning, 1 up, after being 2 down at the turn. Treder won the tenth with a birdie and the eleventh to square the match, lost the thirteenth, and evened the battle at the seventeenth when Spencer overshot the green. On the home hole Treder planted his second shot on the grene, and won with a 4 to a 5.

Against Bass, Treder was 2 down going to the tenth, but found the Baltimorean a tough customer to overhaul. Bass fired a birdie 4 on the fifteenth to win back his 2 up markin after Treder took the thirteenth and fourteenth.

First Nine In 33.

Diffenbaugh shot the first nine in 33, blowing up par with six 4s and three 3s to take a 2 up lead on De Pishon. He dropped the tenth to De Pishon's birdie, and won the fifteenth with a birdie 4. They halved seven of the last nine holes, to tight was the match.

Taylor and Diffenbaugh were all even at the turn. They halved the tenth, eleventh and twelfth. Diffenbaugh took the thirteenth with a 3, Taylor the fourteenth with a par 3. They halved the next two holes. On the seventeenth Diffenbaugh knocked his tee shot to within 8 feet of the pin and sank his putt for a birdie to go one up. The home pro took the eighteenth with a par 5, as Taylor missed his second and took three to reach the green. Diffenbaugh, to the left in 2, played safely for his 5.

Taylor reached the semifinals by deafting Tommy Ryan, of Belle Haven, two up.

Diffenbaugh's morning card:
Out..... 4 4 4 4 4 3 3 4 3—33
In..... 4 4 4 4 3 4 5 3 4—35—68

Results:

Al Treder (Manor) defeated Glenn Spencer (Maryland Country Club), one up.

Johnny Bass (Clifton Park) defeated Charlie Betschler (Hillendale), 2 up; Alex Taylor (Rolling Road) defeated Tommy Ryan (Belle Haven), 2 up; George Diffenbaugh (Indian Spring) defeated Clyde DePishon (Quantico), 2 up.

Semifinals—Bass defeated Treder, 2 up and Diffenbaugh defeated DePishon, 2 up.

Have you ever figured how many puffs you take on a cigar?

No, we have never tried to count the puffs in an El Producto. Every man would get a different result, anyhow.

You'll find the uncopyable El Producto blend both in slender, streamline shapes and full-bodied perfecto sizes. 10c to 25c.

BUT we do know that a ten cent El Producto has more real enjoyment to every puff a smoker takes than any other smoke. What's more, you'll find that an El Producto lasts longer than ordinary cigars, staying lit no matter how slowly you smoke.

That's all a part of Quality—quality workmanship and quality tobaccos—marvelously balanced in a blend of the choicest Havana and other fine tobaccos to give mildness that remains fresh and pleasant, no matter how often you smoke.

Improved Laurel Track Will Open 25-Day Meeting Today

First Event Is Carded At 1:30

Strip in Fine Condition; Officials Optimistic Over Outlook.

By Walter Haight.

THE great American game of sharing the wealth via the mutuel ticket — commonly called hoss racin'—will shift to nearby Laurel today. At 1:30 p. m., or as near that hour as Starter Milton is satisfied with the alignment of the field, the bangtails will dig in and start driving for the first purse of the 25-day meeting. A little more than a minute later, numbers designating the first three horses will be hung on the results board to be followed after a short interval by the prices.

Even before the mutuel awards have been displayed, lines of smiling customers will be forming under the stands while other customers are scanning their "dope sheets" looking for a "good thing" in the next race.

The Laurel show is a thorough one. It offers flat racing, steeplechasing and daily doubling. As usual, the twin wager will be in operation on the first and third races, with only those picking both winners participating in the pay-off.

Officials Optimistic.

Officials of both Laurel and Bowie, the latter to hold sway during the last two weeks of November, are optimistic regarding how their courses will fare financially. It is well known to them that Washington, due mostly to its Government employes, has a mountainous pay roll and it is the Capital that provides more than half of the attendance.

Laurel has had to make its track doubly alluring this year. Improvements to the plant have been made for the convenience of the racegoer and nine stake races have been arranged to draw the first-flight horses. Although Laurel must vie with both New York and New England for horses, the Maryland track seems assured of more than its share, particularly in the stake classes.

Charges Shipped In.

A majority of those stables which competed at Havre de Grace have shipped their charges in, while the influx from the Middle West has been great. Horses that won the seventh race and the daily cheap sprint at the Graw are going to have a difficult time taking purses.

The racing strip is in excellent condition and at least four-fifths of a second faster than Havre de Grace. Many horsemen had their charges in action yesterday morning and all were pleased with the oval.

Although today's program is without a stake race, it is well-rounded and Race Secretary J. P. Turner, sr., has distributed weights in a manner that seems to point to close finishes.

Fountain Head Victor Over Cumberland Club

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 1.—The Fountain Head Country Club's golf team, of Hagerstown, made a clean sweep of its season's series with the Cumberland Country Club by winning its third straight match from the locals at Bedford Springs, Pa., 19½ to 13½ points.

Eleven foursomes were played, six of which were won by Hagerstown, three by Cumberland and two were halved.

At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

At Laurel Race Track.

Dear Al:

It's on to Laurel today and may the best man and woman win. And what did the Bennings forces do during the two-day holiday? We went fishing—for blues. We got the blues—but no fish. But the joke was on Mike. After hours and hours of sight-seeing all over the bay we watched until we were dizzy for the blues but none came in sight. Finally, at nearly sundown, Clocker Mike, who had appointed himself chief lookout, suddenly yelled: "That way, captain! There they are! Full speed ahead!" The captain let fly a barrage of tobacco juice, picked up his field glasses, but failed to change the course. We all thought the captain was a pirate, but he was right. When we came nearer to the "blues" we found that they were two hardy men out for an afternoon swim and it was their arms coming out of the water at every stroke that Mike had mistaken for the blues. As we docked with wet shirts and hungry stomachs, Mike said, "Unlucky at fish, lucky at horses. Anyway 'blues' rhymes with 'lose' and maybe we're better off without them." And I reminded him that "no winners" rhymes with "no dinners." BILL.

Sablin has been carefully tucked away since victory at Havre de Grace. Ought to go well enough in here to account for this event. Credulous changed hands upstate after finishing second. Should prove the one to whip. Mountain Elk has been carefully tuned and likes this track. Figures third best.

Rowes Crump turned in a nice race at the Graw. May favor this track and should get up in time to score in this field. Scudder aired a half in 0:50 over this track yesterday morning and off that work will be the one to beat. Booming Guns might upset all the dope.

Distracting turned in a nice effort last out and has enough foot to take the front end here and never be headed. Treasury Key has been well prepped for a race of this sort. An investment to place might not be out of line.

Red Wagon was very partial to this course last year and is right at peak now. Some Good is fairly consistent and rates the call for the runner-up berth. Marson has been in hiding and might prove the one to upset the apple cart.

Riskulus is a smart performer when listed with this caliber. Worked a mile on Monday in 1:44 and appears to hold best form. Safe and Sound won in most recent try and off that race must be considered the main threat. Legume is hard to guess. Likes track and will be hard to keep out of the picture.

Manager Bill is asked to pick up 120 pounds in this event and must concede weight to entire field, but on recent form appears capable of doing the trick. Ship Executive looks as good as anything else to be second. Ross and Hidden Dust ought to battle it out for third money.

Triolet was never better and with a sane ride must be given the top figure in this group. Arab, always partial to this course, looms as the contender in this big, bulky field. Mad Eagle turned in a good race to win the other day and must be accorded a chance off that race.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

BLACKSBURG, Va., Oct. 1.—Veterans are hustling back to the firing line as Virginia Tech makes ready to renw its old football squabble with University of Maryland in Baltimore Stadium Saturday.

George Sodaro, dynamic little quarter back of the Techmen and expert toe artist, should be back in the line-up after doing nothing more against Clemson's powerful eleven than kicking point after touchdown. Buck Reynolds, a Marylander who hails from Cumberland, probably will be ready for his first game of the year at end, where he played brilliantly in late season games a year ago.

With these two boys back in togs, the Gobblers, who waged a breath-taking scrap for three quarters against a veteran Clemson eleven powerful in all departments, should be primed to give the Old Liners a great battle in Baltimore Stadium. Undaunted by a disastrous fourth quarter that nullified three quarters of remarkable playing against one of the South's finer elevens last week, the Techmen are confident that they will give Marylands veterans a whale of a battle.

Bud Ingles Stars.

And not without reason. Bud Ingles, the son of one of Tech's greatest stars of yesterday, is playing sensational football at guard. He is a 210-pounder with power in every pound. Dave Jones, another boy born and reared not far from the Tech campus, is a steady, capable pivot man. Art Robison, 195-pound sophomore, is coming along fast at tackle. Ben Dodge, a powerful left tackle, is ready to bid for all-star rating after recent illness.

Mel Henry, a 6-footer from Cumberland, Md., should be able to match the best aerial tactics of Bill Guckeyson. Marvin Cregger and Wilburt Kennedy are two light but fast sophomore backs who are developing fast. And Virginia Tech again believes that big Foots Dickerson, the boy whose fine punting almost wrecked Maryland's hopes a year ago, will show the Terps that he can still reel off those 70-yard spirals.

The Techs are thirsting for vict
